By Telegraph to The Times. OMARA (Neb.,) July 2.—[By the Associated Press.] It was after 11 o'clock this morning when Chairman Taubeneck called the People's party convention to order in the Coliseum. The earlier morning hours were occupied by the delegates in discussing the men and measures likely to occupy the attention of the convention during this session. As to candidates, there is no doubt that with Gresham out, Gen. J. B. Weaver of Iowa is the choice of a majority of the delegates present, but many of them are loth to accept even the positive assertion contained in this morning's Associated Press dispatches from the famous Indianian, and think that even yet he may be induced to forsake his position and make the race. The maority, however, accept it as final and are ready to turn to the next most available candidate. As said, this man seems to be Gen. Weaver. In the S "th as to be Gen. Weaver. In the S "th as well as in the West Gen. Weaver is particularly strong, as he conducted much of his campaign in behalf of the Peoples' party in the States south of Mason and Dixon's line. His popularity in that section, added to his great popularity as a Greenback leader in the West, makes him the most prominent candidate mentioned after Gresham.

The great circular Coliseum is decked with flags, banners and evergreens. It presented an animated appearance as with flags, banners and evergreens. It presented an animated appearance as the delegates began to assemble. The utmost enthusiasm was displayed, and it was the evident determination to put aside minor differences and work unitedly for the central object in view, the putting forward of a ticket which would command the largest following possible. Bright sunshine added to the cheerfulness of the scene. The delegates were slow in arriving, but as delegates were slow in arriving, but as delegation after delegation came into the hall it became full of industrial leaders in straw hats and breezy attire in keep-

Just before the opening of the convention it was announced that the Nationalists would meet Sunday morning. There are about 200 of them. They propose to organize. The Minneapolis delegation will ask that a new platform be formulated, embracing of course the fundamental principles of the St. Louis platform, but with a change in the land plank so as not to oppose the ownership of American land by foreigners. They express the belief that it makes little difference whether the landord lives in this country or not.

After the convention had been called to order by Chairman Taubeneck prayer was offered by Rev. Benjamin Diffenbacher, a well-known Alliance man. He

We thank Thee, Heavenly Father, for the parties that have been born in the past and have filled their destinies great and grand. We thank Thee for this glad day and rejoice that Thou dost ever in wisdom upon the dying old build the ever-living new.

THE OMAHA MAYOR ORATES.

The chairman then introduced Hon. George P. Bemis, Mayor of Omaha, who delivered an address of welco In the course of his remarks he said who delivered an address of welcome. In the course of his remarks he said:

That great good may result from your deliberations and actions, I sincerely hope that you will fearlessly face the great issues, which, like the ghost of Banquo, will not down. The silver question still remains the great living issue, but from the way it has been ignored and thrust aside by both Democratic and Republican parties one might suppose it were already settled if not dead forgotten, but no question is ever settled until it is settled. The great wrong done the people by the demonetization act of 1873 remains to be righted. This can only be done by reëndowing silver with the true money function, making it, as intended by the Constitution, equal with gold for all money uses [prolonged applause.] If Republicans and Democrats refuse this they should not complain if the people take the matter in their own hands. The cry of "cheap silver," "dishonest dollar" or even "sound currency" will no longer deceive neither will dear gold as the measure of values be longer tolerated. Dear gold means cheap men, cheap property, hard times, low wages, general stagnation.

TERRILL OF TEXAS TALKS. Three cheers were given for Mayor Bemis, and Hon. Ben Terrill of Texas was introduced and responded in behalf of the convention to the address of wel-come. Among other things Terrill said:

come. Among other things Terrill said:

This convention protests against the present condition of things. It is utterly impossible to stay the movement if every leader of this movement, I care not whether be he Powderly or Weaver, that we trust above all men, were today to put themselves in opposition to it, the movement would sweep over them and their names would be forgottan. Never before in this country has such a convention been assembled. You have your delegate now you will make a platform based upon the fundamental principles of government, and transportation and finance. I believe there is no man who, if a better man than the can be selected for any position, would not yield to him who he believed can carry the flag to success. There will not be a single jar to mar the proceedings of this convention. When the nomination is made and the ticket out you will find every man shoulder to shoulder—a hero in the strife for the right against the wrong. [Cheering.]

People's party is only three months old. My district was carried two years ago for the hemocracy by 16,000. It is in doubt today. The reason for the change is found in the resolutions adopted by the Democratic convention at Chicago. The convention of the People's party will end sectionalism and for that reason alone is entitled to the gratitude of the people.

A PLEA FOR HARMONY.

Chairman Tambanach appropriate the property of the people of the people.

Chairman Taubeneck announced the list of officers selected by the National Committee and they were elected by acclamation. C. H. Ellington of Georgia was introduced as temporary chairman. In his speech of acceptance he thanked the convention for the high honor conferred upon him. Continuing, Ellington spoke eloquently of the great purpose for which the convention is in session. He said. sion. He said:

pose for which the convention is in session. He said:

There has been no other such gathering of the people of North, South, East and West mingling their hosts for such a purpose. When, in the early days, our fore fathers fought for liberty and won, it was with a different foe and by different means. Again, when we fought in the late-rivalry, though been brother and brother, the fight was a bloody one; and now, for the first time, all classes in these United States are marching and marshaling armies for the greatest struggle the world has ever seen. A mortal combat is on and the ballot will be the weapon of war. The eyes of the world are on us. Nothing would give more joy to our opponents than to see this vast assemblage disagree. Hundreds of pens are ready to note the first sound of discord. In every direction the wires are waiting to transmit the hoped-for news. Brethren, friends, let us disappoint them, and from the very beginning shake hands upon this one point—that harmony, unity and goodwill shall prevail.

The speaker continued in this strain at some length. He declared that he was absolutely and untiringly at the service of the convention to that end. The speaker then paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the late President L. L. Polk, of the Farmers' Alliance. The reference to Polk was received with cheers, and when a picture of the dead president was holsted to view on the platform the great convention. the platform the great convention arose and the scene was one of befitting reverence to the memory of the great

THE GAVEL WENT TO PIECES. Then Mrs. Todd of Michigan took the platform and presented the chairman with a gavel carved by the wife of Ben with a gavel carved by the wife of Ben Terrell of Texas, from a tree planted by Washington at Mount Vernon. This announcement was received with tremendous cheers. Continuing, Mrs. Todd caused a great outburst of enthusiasm by recalling the patriotic incidents of the past, such as the gathering of a small body of merchants and farmers to determine to shake off the shackles of British tyranny. She declared that the Constitution of the country has become as inanimate as a lifeless figure of the Goddess of Liberty, and that the birth of the People's party is the first step toward a new declared to the Goddess of Chairman Ellingworth accepted the Chairman Ellingworth accepted the Chairman Ellingworth accepted the gavel in an appropriate speech. He then directed a call of the roll of States to report members of the Committee on Credentials. Unfortunately at the first rap of the new gavel it fell to pieces, the head flying off the handle and rolling down to the foot of the stage. There was a little burst of laughter, but the general feeling was too reverential to allow general merriment.

party in Congress. The communication says in part:

The two Wall street parties have held contentions. They have nominated candidates and are marshalling their forces. They have no aims or objects but the spoils of office while the people are sinking to penury and laborers in cities are dying by starvation and by Pinkerton bullets. It is the mission of our new party, then, to restore to the people their Godgiven rights and the scepter of Government, to restore lands and confiscated highways and to wrest from corporations and money kings the control of the people's money and all other appliances of commerce and our Christian civilization. We have full faith in your united wisdom. The times are auspicious. Men everywhere are surrendering party prejudices and trampling under foot the old party lines. Let us go on with the works on obly begun, that a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

DONNELLE MARKE A SPEECH

While awaiting the report of the Committee on Credentials, Hon. Ignatius Donnelly was introduced and

When the nomination is made and the ticket out you will find every man shoulder to shoulder—a hero in the strife for the right against the wrong. [Cheering.]

As to the South, I want to say it is imbued with the same spirit as you are. [Cheers.] The South will vote for the man who stands upon the St. Louis platform and the man from the South who does not share that spirit had better leave the hall. [Cheers.] I defy any one to point to any part of America more enthusiastic in this movement than the South. In Texas the Having quoted figures showing that the possession of wealth in the hands of farmers has decreased from five-eighths in 1850 to one-fifth in 1890, he declared that no man would fail to see the dark and terrible future into which they were advancing. Some discussion took place as to the propriety of Some discus the committee meeting tomorrow. It was decided adversely and the committee will meet on Monday. Consideratee will meet on Monday. Considerable discussion took place over the preliminary work of the platform. A strong sentimene developed favoring no change from the St. Louis platform, but when a vote was taken only twelve out of the forty or more members were found to favor rigidly adhering to the St. Louis platform.

Finally it was decided that the St. Louis platform be taken as a substantial basis and such other resolutions be added as the exigencies of the situation demanded. Five sub-committees were added as the exigencies of the situation demanded. Five sub-committees were appointed on Preamble, Finance, Transportation, Lands and Miscellaneous Subjects. A plank denouncing the Republican "Force" Bill" was tacitly agreed upon; also a preamble arraigning the platforms and records of the old parties. The sentiment was in Results of the Strike on the Southern Pacific.

A Great Blockade of Freight Trains at Bakersfield.

No Attempts Made by the Company to Resume Traffic.

Strikers Arrested by Deputy United States Marshals for Detaining the Mails→ Indications That the Trouble Will Be Settled.

By Telegraph to The Times.

BAKERSFIELD, July 2 .- [Special.] The freight blockade on the Southern Pacific Railroad at this point, which has been on since 7 o'clock yesterday morn. ing, is fast assuming a serious aspect.
As a result of the tie-up here traffic has been more or less affected on the whole line from San Francisco. Not one freight train has left here in either direction since the hour named, and only trains from the South have arrived. The cause of the tie-up grew out of differences between the freight conductors and brakemen on the one hand and the officials on the other, and involves the question of the schedule of wages and mileage over this division, and possibly the additional matter of the discharge of Conductor Buck. The present situation points strongly in the direction of affecting other departments of the service in such a way as to pro duce an universal suspension of freight and passenger traffic throughout the entire system. If Engineer Webb should be arrested by the United States deputy marshals now here, and carried to Los Angeles, as seems probable, the result indicated will likely sensue.

The tie-up was brought about by non order men and had its origin months ago, when Division Superintendent. Whited reconstructed the schedule after the name of the division had been changed from the Visalia to the San Joaquin division. The former schedule. so the men claimed, provided for 3150 miles as a month's mileage and all extras at that rate, with wages of $75 and $95 for brakemen and conductors, respectively. The reconstructed sched-ule called for 3550 miles per month, with all overplusses in accordance therewith; hence the contention and repeated requests on the part of the employés for a modification of the late schedule: Finally they wired their ul-timatum at noon Thursday, informing the officials of the road that unless some attention was paid to the matter, which they claimed was only justice, they would tie up northbound freight trains after 7 o'clock yesterday. This had the effect of bringing Division Superintend-ent Whited here, who asked for more time to consider the matter. The men declined and the tie-up took place, as indicated, and has been maintained ever

A determined effort was made yesterday afternoon by Trainmaster Fillmore and Superintendent Whited to take conductor Morgan's mixed train north, but it failed. Later, while the engineer and fireman were at suppor the engine was killed; the pins between the cars were all slipped, and no further attempt has been made. Trains headed this way from the north are sidetracked at various points. Trains have arrived filling up with cars, the latest being a stock train. Morgan's train, mostly loaded with Sunset fast freight for San Francisco and way stations, is still here. No attempts have been made today to move trains, except passenger trains, which are in no way involved. So far all attempts at an understanding and adjustment of the differences have failed. General Superintendent Fillmore says, so it is claimed, that he will grant no concessions and the men say they will not go to work unless he does, and so matters stand. Two conferences were had today between "Division Superintendent Thompson, who came here for that purpose, and a Griev-ance Committee, but without any set-

Late this afternoon twelve leaders of the strike were arrested on warrants sworn out before a justice of the peace on charge of malicious mischief in detaining a train yesterday and "killing Webb's engine. They obtained bail at once and were released.

At 8 o'clock a dozen United States deputy marshals arrived from Los Angeles under the leadership of Detective Bill Smith, which caused intense excite ment. It is claimed that the deputies will arrest the leaders and take them to Los Angeles on charge of detaining the United States mail, notwithstanding Morgan's crew agreed to take a passen vesterday afternoon.

The deputies have now served four warrants and a proposition is under consideration at a meeting looking to an adjustment as this report closes. Excitement is running high, but there is a chance for a peaceable settlement and movement of trains. If the trains move, no further arrests will be made. LATER.—Trains may move. The result of the meeting is to allow the trains to go and then try arbitration afterward. A committee was appointed with this end in view.

All the particulars of the strike of Southern Pacific traininen are con-tained in the telegraphic columns today. The influence of the strike has not yet been felt here, and is not expected. No interference to passenger trains has yet been attempted, strikers confining their efforts to freight trains only.

SCRAP HEAP! Passenger trains to and from Los Angeles and the seashore will be crowded tomorrow.

A Los Angeles ticket broker is author ity for the statement that passenger rates are being cut in San Francisco.

Agent W. A. Mitchem, of the Santa Fé route, at San Bernardino, who broke four ribs in a horse and buggy ac-cident a few days ago, is getting along quite well.

Passenger Agent Tincher, of the Southern California lines, after a tour of the lines, is able to confidently pre dict that there will be a big hegira of people from inland points to the sea-shore today and tomperow. The Sonthern Pacific Company has just placed an order with the Pullman just placed an order with the Fullman Company for twelve new sleeping cars. They will be vestibuled, with two drawing-rooms in each, lighted by gas, and with all the comforts known to modern car architecture. Twenty new coaches also have been ordered.

A railroad built from Mojave to Keeler, the present terminus of the Carson and Colorado will make a large and productive region tributary to Los Angeles. Fred Eaton, civil engineer of Los Angeles, has just returned from a stage ride over the route named and he is enthusiastic over the prospects.

The fast train to San Francisco, which reaches that city at 8:45 a.m., leaves Los Angeles at 2 p.m. the day before. Previous statements in variance with this are chargeable to a mistake in figures, or the similarity of a seven and a two as written in copy. The time table as published gives the figures correctly.

The Santa Monica Outlook says:

"Forty carloads of steel rails are not piled up at the foot of Eleventh street, near Vawter's lumber yard. This is enough rails for nine miles of track, which is about the distance fro main road to the rock quarry in Cold-water Canon. Some 2000 creosoted piles are now stored at San Pedro, and will be brought here in a little while."

The passengers on the Santa Fé over-land which arrived here yesterday from the East had quite a lively experience in New Mexico. While going through the county this side of Las Vegas a terrific hail storm was encountered. severity of the storm and size of the hail stones may be estimated from the fact that no less than seventeen windows of the tourist sleeping car were broken. The passengers were thoroughly alarmed.

The Angels, on the other hand, put Rock Rooster.

[Portsmouth (O.,) Tribune.]

Mrs John T. Thomas of Indian Run,

Ky., is the happy possessor of a hen said to be the result of mating a gninea was sent by her mother, Mrs. Capt.

-William Smith, from Vicksburg, Miss.

The hybrid hen is one of the most unique specimens of the feathered tribe and claims the lion's share of attention.

It is singularly marked and doesn't affiliate readily with the other barnyard fowis, although it would seem to be more at home with the guinea half of the family, as its chattering or cackling is a weird sort of a staccato not unlike the mother kind. The crossing of these domestic fowls is so rare as to render this production valuable, and Mrs. Thomas's neighbors are justifiably covetous of the freak.

The State capitol at Albauy, N. Y., even in its unfinished state, is the costlisst building of modern times. Nineteen million six hundred thousand dollars have been expended upon it up to date. The capitol at Washington from the year 1793, when its corner-stone

The most expensive legislature in the world is that of France, which costs annually $8,000,000. The Italian Parliament costs $430,000 a year.

$105,000 for which the trotter, Axtell, was sold in Indiana at the age of 3 years. It is true the local tax assessor only valued the horse for the purposes of his returns at $500 and Axtell's owners' neighbors grew indignant thereat. Whereupon the owners observed that if their horse flesh was assessed at anything like the figures which they paid for him they would move him out of the State, and the indignation quieted down. At that time it was the highest. But on January 11, 1892, Arion was sold by Senator Leland Stanford to I, Malcolm Forbes of Boston for $150,000. THE WORLD'S FAIR

Memorial Membership Certificates-Prep-

The Southern California World's Fair Association received, yesterday, the proof of their memorial membership certificate from the hands of the Los Angeles Lithographic Company. It is an imposing affair, and deserves to be well circulated throughout the United States by the citizens of the six southern counties. The scenes engraved thereon are taken from views within the counties composing the Southern California World's Fair Association. These certificates are to be sold by the local organizations within the counties, for the purpose of increasing the World's Fair appropriation. The fund thus created can be used for preparing any special feature that the district pleases to represent The district pleases to represent. The manner of disposing of these certificates is, for a resident of this county to select some friend, or friends, back East, whom, he would like to have visit the California building at the World's Fair and receive such attentions as would and receive such attentions as would be given were the individual there personally to show him around. He purchases a certificate and has inserted, in the blank specially arranged for it, the name of this particular friend on the certificate, thus making him an honorary member of the Southern California World's Fair Association. Accompany rary member of the Southern California World's Fair Association. Accompanying this certificate is a card on which is signed the name of the party holding the certificate, and countersigned by the secretary of the association. This card states that when you visit the Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893 you are cordially invited to visit the California headquarters at the State building and earnestly requested to bring with you such friends as you may desire, where you will receive the courdesire, where you will receive the cour tesies and benefits to which you are entesies and benefits to which you are entitled by reason of your friends having paid the necessary membership fee to the association. Present this card to the superintendent of any department in the California building and you will be cordially received. This entry card will pass the friend from the management of one department to another, and if you have any special exhibit in the building which you wish your friend to see the thing necessary is to mention to see the thing necessary is to mention the fact and the exhibit will be promptly shown him. As a memorial feature the certificate is worth every cent it costs, and every citizen should purchase one and mail to his friend with the complimentary card.

The work in the various counties and districts is beginning to get into sys-tematic shape and more interest taken in the preparation of exhibits than heretofore.

Many of the districts in Los Angeles county are making preparations for se-lecting the best specimens of the com-ing fruit crop, with the intention of making an exhibit in both the State and department buildings. The pre-mium offered by the Los Angeles County World's Fair Committee, of $30 for the best display of wheat and barley, in the sheaf and measure, is bringing a great many inquiries and the prospects are that there will be a lively contest for the award. Also the premiums offered by the Phillips Excursion Company, of a round trip ticket to the World's Fair for the tallest corn, biggest beets and largest squashes and the heaviest sweet potatoes, etc., has caused many a rancher to give his crop an extra hoe-ing and compelled some to pull off a few surplus pumpkins from the vine in order to increase the size of the remaining ones.

Parties in the county having fine clustered fruit should send the same to the Chamber of Commerce and have it the Chamber of Commerce and have it preserved in the large display jars the committee has on hand. Some of the late arrivals of these jars measure forty inches high and nine inches in diameter. Who has the inches in diameter. Who has branch of fruit that will fill them?

Roping Trees.

[Pacific Rural Press.]

Heavily laden trees, which, in spite of proper pruning and thinning, are likely to spread apart and split down by the weight of their crop, can often be adequately sustained by the use of rope instead of props. In many cases a bale rope or other light rope passed completely around the tree at a proper height, and caught here and there over a twig so as to prevent slipping down, will afford all the help needed to enable the tree to stand up well with a good load. Of course, as the pressure is downward and outward on all parts of downward and outward on all parts of the branches, each side of the tree pulls against an opposite side, and none can droop if the rope is strong and unvielding. Another way to use the rope is to pass it back and forth through the center of the tree, so that each branch is balanced against an opposite one, but probably the encircling rope properly placed is best, for it not only sustains the vertical strain, but, to a certain.extent, acts laterally also and helps the whole tree in a strong wind.

CARPENTER IN RUSSIA.

THE TIMES will begin the publication in July of a series of travel letters from Russla by Frank G. Carpenter. These letters will give the best view of Russla and its institutions that has yet been presented to the people of the United States. Mr. Carpenter has carried with him the best of letters of introduction from the Cabinet Ministers at Washington to the noted officials of Russia and from the secret service of the Treasury Department to the heads of the chiefs of police, and the probability is that everything in the country will be thrown open to him. Armed with a camera he will travel for thousands of miles through some of the most inter-esting regions of the Czar, will visit the tamine districts, sail down the Volga and rill probably spend some time at Nijni l, and where $100,000,000 changes hands every year. St. Petersburg and Moscow will be visited and the life of the people will be described. After some onths in Russia Mr. Carpenter will visit other parts of the continent, devoting himself to the writing up of such subjects and men as are especially interesting to American readers, and sparing neither time, money, labor nor influence to get the best of foreign information for us. safe to predict that this series of letters will be interesting in the extreme, and they will surpass, if anything, the writer's travel matter in the past. It will be remembered that he has traveled more widely, perhaps, and more successfully than other correspondent in the United States. Four years ago he made a year's tour around the world, during which he had long interviews with the King of Korea, Li Hung Chang, the Viceroy of China; the King of Greece, the Khedive of Egypt, the Sultan of Jahore, and other famed Oriental potentates, and last year he spent the spring in Mexico, where he had a long interview with President Diaz in the National Palace, and gave an entirely view of the country and its people Mr. Carpenter's letters are practical common sense letters. He believes in describ-ing things as they are and he knows just what the people want to read, and is able to tell it in an interesting way. He be-lieves that the letters he will send us from Russia will be the best that he has ever written, and he says he has no doubt but that he will be able to get through some of the least known parts of this most inter-esting land. 'He is at this writing in Russia and is probably making his way to day among the starving peasants of the

ABOUT 4000 acres in the Chino ranch have been devoted to the growing of sugar beets this year. Of this 500 acres are now mature and next Tuesday the work of harvesting will begin. On the following Monday the sugar factory will be started for its second season's run. The rest of the fields will mature in succession during the next three months, so as to keep the harvesting force and factory continuously at work.

THE American Economist prints an instructive table showing the imports of certain products in this country for 1889 and 1891-the years immediately preceding and following the enactment of the McKinley tariff bill. The principal competing agricultural products affected by the protective tariff are horses, barley, eggs, hay, hops, flaxseed and tobacco. From 1889 to 1891 imports of ten products named fell off in value from $84,835,057 to $16,-780,885-enlarging the home market for American farmers by $18,054,222.

THE Democracy are already regretting that they adopted so radical a free trade platform plank at Chicago. They wish they had something more easy to straddle. But it is there, nailed down, that the Federal Government has no constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties, except for the purpose of revenue only." Ohio voted solidly for it; so did New York, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, and several of the Southern States. Among the States voting solidly against it were Califor. nia, Connecticut, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

THE present campaign between Beniamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland is the first instance in fifty-two years, and the third in the history of the Government, of a second race for the Presidency between the same competitors. Thomas Jefferson and John Adams were the opposing candidates in 1796 and 1800, and Martin Van Buren and William Henry Harrison in 1836 and Andrew Jackson and John 1840. Quincy Adams were, indeed, both canso many candidates that no two were considered competitors. And then replaced such teachers as they were there was no choice by the people

Educational Matters

The annual summer storm in local educational circles is still raging. ports and counter reports come thick and fast. On some charges the members of the Board of Education have been tried, convicted and condemned without a hearing. They are the subjects of denunciation for some things in which they are probably blamable and for others of which they are assuredly not at fault.

While we have earnestly deprecated the introduction of political methods in the aetails of school management; while we are against arbitrary dis missals of teachers without adequate cause, we have no desire to fix upon members of the Board of Education faults which are not their own, but rather of the system under which they work. There can be no question that this system would be the better for a thorough overhauling.

Every man who attends political conventions knows the manner of selecting a candidate for the Board of Education. At the last moment it is remembered that this important nomination is not yet made. A nominee is hastily agreed upon and he is elected or defeated with his ticket. Often many of the voters in his own ward do not know him by name. Less thought is generally given to selecting this official than to choos ing any other, save, perhaps, the sergeant-at-arms. If the matter is remem bered again it is to wonder "who is the man from our ward anyway?" or to remark that "any man who will go on the school board is a fool."

That representative citizens compose our boards of education is due, not to the forethought of the voters, but to the Providence that watches over the interests of children and other inca pables. Members of the Board of Education are required to justly and economically disburse the school funds, to employ and (what is far more difficult) to discharge teachers; to visit schools; to have a knowledge of the efficiency of some 200 teachers; to keep a watchful eye on every one connected with the system from the superintendent to the janitor-contractor. They must find places for the relatives and friends of their constitutents; give ear to every society and crank who has an educational fad; be present at cooking school dinners, flag-raisings and other educational entertainments, and attend to their private business nights and Sundays.

What is the compensation for this sacrifice of time? Not one penny! The members of the City Council assemble a few hours one day in each week and attend to committee work besides for which they receive $100 per month apiece. Rich men for the Senate and for the School Board! For any movement of the body in the weighty matters devolving upon them that happen to cross individual interests they are charged openly and loudly with dishonest motives; with being under the control of cliques-are credited with everything but a conscience and an honest purpose. They are supposed to spend their nights in planning and their days in executing schemes looking toward a second term of their fat offices And the feeling is deep seated that if they are not "sat upon" vigorously once in awhile they will even aspire to a third incumbency.

Now let us look at this matter without prejudice. When the present school board came into office they found themselves in financial shallows. plaints as to extravagant methods which they found in vogue were rife. They faced the cifficult taste of running the schools upon insufficient funds without impairing their efficiency. They began to economize to meet the emergency They found in each eight-room building eight working teachers, and an orna-ment in the shape of a principal at a salary of $125 per month to superintend these capable and experienced in structors. They found a superintendent to superintend these superindents and a deputy superintendent and a clerk to do the routine work of the office. By obliging the oramental superintendents to each teach one class in addition to the supervision of the building a saving of some $1-5,000 yearly, was effectedenough to run the kindergarten or nearly enough to run the High school. No complaints of any less thoroughness in teaching or discipline has followed this change. Neither have the board received any approval or encouragement from the greaning taxpayers. At present the board is trying to dispossess a supernumerary in the guise of the deputy superintendent. These matters are facts in recent history well known to the general public.

The methods of procedure in retaining and discharging teachers are not so the teachers dismissed last year that no specific charges were entered against them. Previous to last year the outgoing teacher. designated, and in effect. dismissed by the superintendent, was utterly without chance of redress or ap It is a fact that for several years past a number of teachers have been dropped from the list at the end of each The board last year departed from precedent so far as to give audididates for President in 1824 and 1828, ence not only to the teacher, but to re but in the former campaign there were gard the expression of opinion from

In an interview published in an evening paper a member of the board is represented as saying that the selection of teachers this . time has been made with the assistance of the superintendent, who had given more than ordinarily careful attention to the schools and teachers this past year. We trust that the members of the board are as ready now as heretofore to cerrect any mi takes and rectify any injustice that is made evident to them.

Certainly, the discharged teacher should have the privilege of knowing any and all charges entered and a chance given to defend himself or herself. No star chamber proceedings should be tolerated in this republican institution. The feeling of insecurity engendered by knowing that a complaint from an unruly pupil or his disgruntled parent, from an envious rival or an out side enemy, may result in his or her peremptory dismissal with no assigned cause, must have its effect upon the teacher's efficiency as both instructor and disciplinarian and reduce the discipline in the public schools.

We cannot afford to have our city brought into disrepute by these constan broils in school matters. It is evident that there is a serious flaw in the system of management. Let us find it. Having found it, let us correct it with a strong hand. The trend of the best ed ucational thought of the time, reinforced by the opinion of the experienced teachers in our own schools, is that no ne but a superintendent, or some off cial who gives his whole time to study ing the details of the school system, car understand the needs of the schools and be qualified to judge as to the efficiency of the teachers. Therefore, let the re sponsibility of discharging teachers be fixed upon the Superintendent, with a City Board of Examination, according to the State law, as a court of appeals

An attaché of the building who understood the apparatus might have done this and thus quenched the blaze in its very incipiency, saving probably several thousand dollars damages. THE WOODLAND FIRE.

Losses Fully $250,000-Business Blocks to WOODLAND, July 2 .- By the Associated Press.] Yesterday's fire plowed its way through the most important business portion of this city, consuming big brick houses as readily as if made of paper. The fire was got under con-trol about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The efforts of the special engine with a foreman from Sacramento were instrumental in saving the Beemer block, in which are many residences.

The City Trustees last night appointed seven special policemen to patrol the city and guard against further outbreaks and a fire engine kept a stream on the embers most of the night. The amount of loss will reach fully $250,000. The people were disposed to take a hopeful view of the csse this morning. The large owners who were burned out express the intention of immediately rebuilding with better buildings than before. Ten residences in the southern part of the city were burned. These will be at once rebuilt. The City Trustees last night appointed vill be at once rebuilt.

The community is saddened by the death of W. W. Porter, who was killed by the falling of a wall while trying to get property from the operahouse. He was superintendent of the Woodland Water Company and a leading citizen.

The fire department was much hampered by insufficient water supply, caused by the smaliness of the water mains. The fire is likely to lead to rad-ical improvement in the system of mafins. The fire is likely to lead to radical improvement in the system of city water works. Many small losses are being reported in addition to those already published, and the first estimate of losses will probably be exceeded.

RESULTS OF THE DAY.

OMARA (Neb.,) July 2.—[By the Associated Press.] The first day's session of the People's Party Convention was a harmonious one and promises well for the great independent organization. The convention is still entirely at sea Presidential ticket and the indications are that when the roll is called for the presentation of candidates for the Presidency, at least a dozen names will be placed tefore the convention. All doubts as to Gresham's candidacy being settled, he is no longer mentioned in connection with the nomination. There is little doubt that Hon. James B. Weaver of Iowa will lead on the first ballet, although it is improbable that any nomination will be reached until two or three ballets have been taken. Stewart of Nebraska, Senator Kyle, Ignatius Donnelly, Jones of Nevada and Vandervort, a prominent G.A.R. man, are a few of the indications are that when the nelly, Jones of Nevada and Vandervort, a prominent G.A.R. man, are a few of those mentioned for the Presidential nomination. Despite the protest of the Nevada delegates, members of the silver league look with favor upon Stewart, and nothing but a decided stand of the delegates of his own State will prevent his name being presented to the convention. There is but little mention of the Vice-Presidency so far.

Discussion of County Division. The Fruit-growers' Union.

Just now the Pomona people and press are jubilant over the fact that THE TIMES and other Los Angeles dailies speak favor. and other Los Angeles dailies speak favor-ably of county division. The suggestion of THE TIMES that a committee from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce confer with the promotors of the scheme, meets with general approval. It is not that our people are not proud of their county and the Southern California metropolis, but that they feel a great expense would be saved them, and that the valley and city would receive a great impetus toward growth and receive a great impetus toward growth and development.

The case of the people vs. Schwaarker, for violation of the saloon ordinance, was continued yesterday with the old-time delays and long-drawn-out, wearying examinations of jurors as to their competency. This ought not to be: It keeps our fruit-growers and farmers away from their work-and-they are so busy at this season of the year that they don't care a rap whether prohibition or high license wins. What is the matter with excusing all who are exempt from jury duty, throwing the other names in a box and drawing twelve out for a jury? Who says this would not be a fair, honorable way to try the cases? Schwarker's case has caused eighty men to be summoned, and the case continued till after the distinguished Fourth. Some of the men summoned are madder than Hill, and have a right to be.

It is neither luck nor chance that brings to our house the large and growing trade that we enjoy, but it is our systematic efforts to place before our trade only the best of wares at prices that cannot be matched nor equalled elsewhere. We are the only house in our line that is constantly represented by one of the firm at New York. Thinking patrons will readily see and understand the benefit of our being in the market and doing our own selecting and buying. It is quite different from deputizing a stranger to do your work. It is very much different, inasmuch as a principal will buy a line of merchandise at an inducement price, instantly at a second's reflection, whereas, a hired buyer has no option but fills orders in their regular rotation only. These inducement prices occur, yes they occur daily, which is the simple secret why our stock abounds with far more undervalues for buyers to feast upon than does the Curious Coincidences That Have Been Connected With the Day.

"The most astounding coincidences of history since those dates which identify Cromwell's career are those associwith our natal anniversary," wa a com.nent once made by Gen. Garfield. little thinking that he was himself to furnish another of these strange coinci-

As John Adams was dying he murmured feebly, "And Thomas Jefferson still survives," and Jefferson on that same day, realizing that death was near, was at peace because his wish had been gratified, and he had been permitted to survive until the anniversary of the immortal event whose declaration he had penned.

"General, how many Presidents have

"General, how many Presidents have died upon the Fourth of July?" said Gen. Garfield to Postmaster-General James on that anniversary in 1881.
"Three, Mr. President," was Gen. James's reply, with difficulty mastering his emotion, for he feared that perhaps before the sun had set upon that day a fourth would be added to the list. Garfield, racked with pain, looked with pathos in his glance into the eyes of his Postmaster-General for a moment, and then closed his own as though in resigthen closed his own as though in resig-nation to the dread which there he saw Adams should have both passed y upon the fiftieth anniversary of and Adams should have both passed away upon the fiftieth anniversary of the day when Independence was declared has been deemed worthy of notice by even the most unimaginative of historians. Jefferson was the writer of the original draft of the Declaration, but the Committee of- Congress appointed to rivise this draft made some slight changes, the interlineations in the handwriting of John Adams, Roger Sherman and Benjamin Franklin being still visible. The instrument is carefully preserved in the State Department as Washington. While Jefferson was the writer and the formulator of this instrument, Adams was the orator who defended it and pleaded for it before the Congress. Thus these two men, more than any other of the great men of the revolutionary times, were identified with this the most powerful writzen instrument since Magna Charta.

of the revolutionary times, were identified with this the most powerful writzen instrument since Magna Charta.

After Adams retired from the Presidency, not even waiting, it is said, to receive with courtesy his successor. Jefferson, he returned to his home at Quincy, his career, as he believed, being finished. He was then 65 years of age, and as he passed from the youth of old age to the maturity of it he took great joy not only in watching the development of the country and criticising the policy of the Republicans, as Jefferson's party was then called, but especially was he gratified in the promise which his son was then giving of continuing the influence of the Adams name. Mr. Adams, unlike Jefferson, was possessed of sufficient wealth to be able to live in comfort. He foresaw that his son might attain to the Presidency, and he earnestly prayed that he might live long enough to see another Adams President. When, therefore, in 1825, John Quincy Adams became the President, twenty-four years after his father's relinquisment of the office, the venerable patriot declared that he was quite ready at any time for the summons which would take him from earth. Durquite ready at any time for the summons which would take him from earth. Dur ing the following year Mr. Adams, feeling the infirmities of age and knowing that he could not long survive, became possessed of, one earnest desire. He hoped that he would be spared long enough to see the sun dawn upon the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. The hope was realized and it seemed as though, being thus gratified, this great intellect of the revolution cared not to live throughout revolution cared not to live throughou the day. He expired during the fore noon, almost his last words being: "And Thomas Jefferson still survives."

THE DEATH OF JEFFERSON. Jefferson did survive, but only for few hours, for he was then dying. He too, for some months previous to this mi-centennial anniversary had been ever upon that day. It seemed at times as though life could not be contained in his trail body as long as that. But when the morning of the Fourth of July. 1826, dawned there came to Jefferson's countenance a look of serenity and exquisite joy, and at that moment he began to yield his hold on life and ceased breathing a few hours later. Neither of these yield his hold on life and ceased breathing a few hours later. Neither of these great men had thought of this possible impressive double coincidence of that day, nor did the country know of it until sone days after, for communication was slow. If the deaths of these two men had solemn and pathetic suggestion by reason of this strange association with the immortal part they took in building a new republic, a double pathos is added by the story of Jefferson's closing years. He was harassed by poverty. His fame was of such fascination that thousands were attracted to his home at Monticello, whom he received with the characteristic hospitalty of his state. Sometimes the mansion LOS ANGELES, SUNDAY, JULY 3, 1892.—SIXTEEN PAGES.

was a caravansary—its sixty beds being occupied by self-invited guests, the slaves being busy with the care of these people and Jefferson's farm being taxed for the provisions to support them. He endured this with patience, although the horrors of debt were giving him nights of misery. It came at last to the point where to raise money. He was compelled to sell his library to Congress, and even that sum of $20,000 did not long stay the disaster. In his extremity he appealed to the State of Virginia for a charter for a lottery in which his estate at Monticello was to be the prize. Thus har assed this noble and conspicuous figure of the revolution passed the evening of his days, and those who were with him at the end have said that it seemed as though the hope that he might live until the fiftith Fourther of labe and these though the hope that he might live until the fiftieth Fourth of July and then be taken away was the only measure of comfort which he had in this last year of his life.

HOW THE COUNTRY RECEIVED THE NEWS The 1st of August had come before the people of the United States knew that Jefferson and Adams had passed that Jefferson and Adams had passed away upon this semi-centennial anniversary. The announcement produced a profound and solemn impression. It was regarded as an unmistakable sign of providential interference. Preparations were made everywhere for memorial services. The spirit of k17.6 was stirred anew and the story of that day of birth and of the services of these two men upon that epoch making occasion was repeated till every man and every child knew it as they knew the stories of the Scriptures.

stories of the Scriptures.

Edward Everett, then in the first flush Edward Everett, then in the first flush of his fame as an orator, was invited to deliver a eulogy at Cambridge, and Chancellor Kent at New York. But the Nation looked to one man—Daniel-Webster—as the sufficient eulogist of these men and the adequate commentator upon the strange significance of their deaths upon this commemorative day. Webster was chosen to deliver the eulogy in Boston, and when the Nation heard of this the people said. "It is well!"

Webster's eulogy has become historic. It is one of the greatest speeches of this orator. It is one of the American classics. Webster was mightily impressed by the coincidence of these double deaths, and as he had been a close student of the careers of Adams and Jefferson, and knew much of the secret motives as well as the public ones which inspired them when they acted in union, and when afterward they were separated on national policies, he was inspired as he had been selected. separated on national policies, he was inspired as he had been on only one occasion before, and only three or four times afterward. He had a magnificent audience, and a part of his eulogy has been made familiar to every schoolboy in the land.

That part begins with the words "Sink or swim, live or die. survive or perish." Probably nine out of ten of those who have spoken those lines or who now recall them are of opinion that it was part of an oration delivered by John Adarus on the occasion when the Dollard. Adams on the occasion when the Decla ration of Independence was laid before Congress. That, however, is not the truth. The words are those of Webster, and not of Adams; the orator made use of them to suggest what Adams might have said while thus speaking. The diction, the thought, the peculiar mental mannerism were so suggestive of John Adams that the quotation was then and has been since quite generally accepted as an extract from one of his accepted as an extract from one of his

Five years after the deaths of Adams and Jefferson another ex-President passed away. James Monroe after his retirement from the Presidency to New York city to live. Mr. Monroe was financially embarrassed; more than was innancially embarrassed; more than that he was in actual poverty. He had thought to take up the practice of law in New York city, but he found that his health and his age were serious obstacles to professional success. Not even his prestige as an ex-President served to bring him clients. He lived with his son-in-law, who was postmaster of New-York, and who through mismanage mentor for some other reason went under a financial cloud. He was even accused of financial improprieties.

The ex-President lived, the life of a accused of financial improprieties.

The ex-President lived, the life of a recluse in New York, his proud spirit humiliated by the embarcassments of poverty and by the sorrows which came to his family. Many citizens of New York were not aware that the ex-President had taken up his residence in that city, and the first intimation that they had that he had been living among them was the announcement of his death. He died on the Fourth of July, 1831, after a short illness. He too, knowing that his end was near, prayed that he might survive until the Nation's anniversary, and he seemed content when on the afternoon of that day they told him that he had but a few moments more to live.

Mr. Monroe was buried in a little cemetery in the heart of New York, and there his remains rested practically unmarked and unhonored for nearly twenty years. At last in response to a sentiment created in Virginia the resentiment created in Virginia the remains were removed and taken by the steamship Ericsson to Richmond, where they were interred in the Hollywood Cemetery, and there a very plain shaft marks their final resting place.

Some OTHER CONCIDENCES.

SOME OTHER COINCIDENCES.

Chief Justice Marshall, who did more perhaps than any other person of his time to give permanence and explanation and judicial determination to the Constitution and when had convenient to the Constitution, and who had served as Chief Justice for thirty-five years, lay upon his deathbed on July 4, 1835. Those about him thought he would expire on that day, and he would have been content to have it so. He lingered, however, breathing his last upon the morning of July 6. the morning of July 6.

President Zachary Taylor was smitter with mortal disease upon July 4, 1850. Upon that day the corner-stone of the Washington monument was laid, and the President took chief part in these ceremonies. Exposed with bare head to the glare of a Washington midsumer sup. he was somewhat varenous by mer sun, he was somewhat overc mer sun, he was somewhat overcome by the heat. Returning to the White House in that condition he ate with im-prudence, and that night took to bed, which he never left. A few days later President Taylor passed away. Garfield's Last rounts of sult. used to meet quite frequently and talk over the times of the great conflict, and Gen. Johnston said in the conversation with the writer that both Sherman and himself agreed that the war should have ended immediately after the Fourth of July of 1863.

July of 1863.

It is impossible now to quote Gen. Johnston's precise words, yet what he said can be reported with substantial accuracy. Said he:

"The climax of the civil war was reached upon the Fourth of July, 1863. The fate of the Confederacy was then determined, at least from the military point of view. That is Gen. Sherman's opinion; I believe it is the opinion of Gen. Grant, and I know that it is the view of every military officer of high rank who commanded in the Southern rank who commanded in the Southern armies. At least it is the opinion of all with whom I have talked about the matter. It was an extraordinary coin-cidence that the fate of that effort to establish a new government should have been simultaneously determined in the great West and upon the Atlantic slope, by battles a thousand miles apart. Had Lee been victorious at Gettysburg with Grant a victor at Vicksburg, or had Grant been repulsed at Vicksburg and Lee beaten at Gettysburg, it would have still remained a military question. Had still remained a military question. Had Lee won at Gettysburg and the Confed-erate forces repulsed and beaten Grant's versary.

Every one who remembers anything of the war will recall and with something of the thrill of excitement the news first caused him how when throughout the North the victory of Gettysburg was being so magnificently celebrated there came in the afternoon dispatchesy containing the simple announcement "Vicksburg has surrendered to Gen. Grant." The excitement and enthusiasm were only excelled when a year and asm were only excelled when a year and a half later came the news of Apregionation.

THE COINCIDENCE OF OREGON.

The State of Oregon has, perhaps, special reason or a double reason for celebrating with enthusiasm the Fourth of July. It was at one time very doubtful whether the Oregon territory, which is now divided up between the State of Oregon and Washington, would be the possession of the United States or of Great Britain. The two countries had been in dispute for many very respectpossession of the United States or of Great Britain. The two countries had been in dispute for many years respecting the ownership. Prof. McMaster in a recent paper declares that one of the most romantic chapters of American history is that one which tells the story of how the United States at last came into possession of this magnificent empire of the remote Northwest. McMaster says that in 1835 Marcus Whitman, a missionary sent by the Methodist Board of Missions to carry the Bible to the Flathead Indians who had sent a delegation to St. Louis to get "the White Man's Bible," crossed the mountains and entered the Columbia Valley. A year later he was sent back with his wife and in his company were H. I. Spaulding and his wife, and these were the first white women who had ever crossed the Rocky Mountains. Then Chicago was a village of 100 people; then the railway locomotive was just beginning to be seen on a few miles of iron strap railway in the East. Many years later the first railway train entered Chicago. This little party of missionaries met the first white man born in Cincinnati. the first railway train entered Chicago. This little party of missionaries met the first white man born in Cincinnati. The missionaries went on the South Fork by way of the Laramie and entered the South Pass which furnished for years afterward the only way of approach to Oregon for the thousands of emigrants from the East. Here is the Creat Divide, here a traveler constant emigrants from the Last. Here is the Great Divide; here a traveler can stand and hurl a stone into the headwaters of the Yellowstone, which ultimately finds its way to the Gulf of Mexico, and cast-ing his pebble to the west it will strike Columbia River, which empties into the Pacific.

On the Fourth of July, 1836, Missionary Whitman stood on this spot and looked over into Oregon, and McMaster says: "When Whitman reached the day and the this spot he recollected the day and the work which lay before him, and he paused a short way down the Pacific slope, called on the party to dismount, raised the American flag, and, while they kneeled around the Bible, he, with prayer and praise, took posssession of the Western continent in the name of Christ and his church."

The story of the negotiations and the conventions which resulted in the relinquishment by Great Britain of its ciaim to Oregon is too long to here be narrated, but in the main the claim of the United States rested upon the discovery and possession of this noble lished in the United States when the 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence is reached.

Col. Albert Shaw and Mr. Depew are of the opinion that within the next twenty-five years Buffalo is likely to become the greatest manufacturing city in the United States. Col. Shaw predicts a population of more than 1,000,000 and Mr. Depew believes these figures are not too large. This development will be due almost entirely to the utilization of part of the enormous water power of Niagara Falls. Already the eastern tunnel is nearly completed, and on the west bank of the Niagara river another tunnel will be cut for water power which will drive enormous electric dynamos. It is the opinion of Col. Shaw that electricity will be furnished here sufficient to light all the great cities of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and to furnish motive power for many manufacturing establishments. It is regarded as certain by capitalists that the plateau extending from Buffalo to the Niagara river will be occupied by manufacturers because permanent and cheap power can be furnished pied by manufacturers because perman-ent and cheap power can be furnished by this capture of a part of the enor-mous force generated by this great waterfall and which in the past has gone to waste.

Although C. P. Huntington does not expect to live to see it, yet he is convinced that on the Fourth of July, 1926, there will be a great city at Newport News, Va. Mr. Huntington regards that port as sure to concentrate the traffic from the South and Southwest which seeks the ocean. Railway lines will center there in his opinion; the main shipments of cotton and to bacco abroad will be from this port, and he is of the opinion that on the level plain whereon once Gen. Butler's armies were encamped and whence frightened'Union soldiers witnessed the sea-fight which revolutionized the sea-light which revolutionized the navies of the world, there will be built a city containing 250,000 people. Mr. Austin Corbin believes that early in the next century a new seaport will have been created at the eastern extremity of Long Island whence the swiftest of ocean steamships will sail for Great Britain, making the distance between land and land in perhaps less than four days. Prof. Adams is of opinion that a great seaport and metropolis will have developed somewhere on the will have developed somewhere on the Puget Sound by 1926, and Jay Gould has said some things to friends of his which suggest that he is of opinion that somewhere in the vicinity of El Paso a city of considerable size and great compared in importance will have been exmercial importance will have been es-tablished and will flourish early in the

THE POPULATION OF GREAT CITIES.

It is apparently easy to estimate approximately what the population of the greater cities will be on the 150th anriversary of the nation's birth. Gen. Francis A. Walker estimates that in round numbers at that time the population of the United States will be from 100,000,000 to 419,000,000. Of course if there should come the annexisted the Canadian dominions this ation of the Canadian dominions this to push the curtain aside a little so that he might look out upon the day. The physicians had been with him all night, were with him then. The anxious fam ily were in adjoining rooms in dread of a summons which might call them to the bedside of the dying President. The physicians watched with keenest eye each symptom. They were fearful of a secondary hemorrhage, and if that of a secondary nemorrange, and it that came Garfield would speedily pass away. The streets of Washington were hushed. It was a morning of sadness and not of commemorative joy. The gloom of the tomb seemed to settle upon the capital. People walked hither and thither with silent, apprehensive tread, as though fearful that their footsteps might make disturbing noise. The sound of the cannon and the cracker was not heard. Many persons remained in their houses all day, being in no mood for festival Anxious throngs gathered around the elm tree in the White House yard, elm tree in the White House yard, whereon were posted frequent bulletins, and after reading them turned away smiling sadly and saying. "Thank. God, he still lives." In the early forenoon members of the Cabinet called and saw their chief for a moment, and it was then that the President said to Gen. James, "How many presidents have died upon the Fourth of July?"

When the evening came and the doc-army at Vicksburg, from the military point of view the Confederacy would undoubtedly have been established.

"Vicksburg was the key of the west; every military man knew that. When that city fell it opened up the entire west to the Union armies and the entire southwest as well. It hemmed the Consouthwest as well. It menimed the Con-federate forces into a little strip between the Blue Ridge Moun-tains and the sea. On the other hand, Lee staking everything at Gettysburg staked the only means of concentrating resistance to the approach of the Federal western armies. He lost; Vicksburg fell, and there was not a man worthy of the name of general upon the Confederate side who did not then know that the military demonstration of the South was doomed to failure, yes had failed. In my conton it was useless to failed. In my opinion it was useless to continue the struggle. It meant only useless loss of lives, unnecessary waste of property and causeless suffering."

The writer asked Gen. Johnston if it had ever occurred to him that it was if not significant, at least a striking coin-cidence, that these two Federal vic-tories should have occurred upon the Nation's anniversary day.

"Indeed it has. I have thought of it often. It is, of course, speaking as one with military training, a pure coincidence. Yet I know well-that when the news came to me that Vicksburg had surrendered on the Fourth of July, at almost the same moment at which I realmost the same moment at which I re-ceived the news that Lee had been de-territory thus taken in the name of the church by Whitman on the Fourth of July.

Andrew H. Green estimates that the population of New York city as it now is will not be far from 3,000,000 it 1926; but it is his idea—and that or many other of the ablest men in New York that here the twentieth cene. ceived the news that Lee had been defeated at Gettysburg, my first thought was and on the Fourth of July, too.''

Of course the battle of Gettysburg was over, and the victory had been won before the dawn of the Fourth. Yet the echoes and smoke of the battle were still lingering, and upon that day the exhausted soldiers of the victorious army who had been fighting on the 1st and 2d and 3d were yielding themselves up to that grateful rest which they had so well earned. And it was in the most impressive demonstration of the fourth of July in the future would not be so much commemorative, perhaps, as it would be declaration, and would be declaration of the greater New York at the one this day in the future the magnificent social and industrial progress of the United States would be theme of celebration, and would itself furnish so well earned. And it was in the most impressive demonstration of a nearly equal number. It is harder to estimate the probable population of Chicago. Certain prodigious developments now in contemplation are likely to make that city—if not a seaport—at least a great post. If the canal which is in contemplation is cut across the lower Michigan peninsula, and is made is in contemplation is cut across the lower Michigan peninsula, and is made deep enough to float ocea... steamships, and if the ship canal is cut from Chicago to the Mississippi, then it is easy to see that Chicago—in addition to being a great railway—will also be a great shipping center. Vessals loaded great shipping center. Vessals loaded at its piers on Lake Michigan would carry grain to be discharged at the wharves at Liverpool, or other vessels proceeding through the ship canal to the Mississippi would pass down that river Mississippi would pass down that river to the gulf, thence by the Nicaragua Canal to San Francisco. Ex-Senator Warner Miller, in a recent conversation with the writer, asserted that before the beginning of the twentieth century the great waterway across Nicaragua would be completed. In Nicaragua would be completed. In view of these possibilities, no one can offer any accurate estimate of the extent of Chicago's growth within the next twenty-five years.

The best opinion is that a great city is sure to be developed at the western extremity of Lake Superior, and that by 1926 Duluth and its sister city, Superior, will have become a great metropolis

John W. Bookwalter, who has made special study of the wheat-producing capacity of the West, is of opinion that even before the end of this century the limit of production will have been reached unless new areas are added by irrigation. Mr. Bookwalter's estimate is that within the next five years the population of the United. States will have passed the capacity of the West to feed it with wheat. For many years the wheat-producing capacity was far greater than the consuming demand of the home population. The enormous development of railways special study of the wheat-producing development of railways bisecting the 500,000,000 square miles, which is about the extent of the wheat-producing area, the invention of labor-saving farming machines, making it possible for one man or one company to cultivate thousands of acres in a single day, have brought the wheat area completely under subjection. Irrigation, Mr. Bookwalter says, may furnish some additional wheat lands, but yet the United States will by the year 1900 have practically reached its limit as a wheat-producing country, and while we can grow no more wheat our population is steadily increasing. If this be true, the center of political gravity would be shifted. it possible for one man or one company ily increasing. If this be true, the cen-ter of political gravity would be shifted. The United States will be compelled to import wheat, and the effect of this import wheat, and the effect of this upon political and financial questions is too great even for the ablest of statesmen and financiers to determine. But if by the year 1928 the United States is a great importer of wheat it.

will be an enormous producer of corn and other breadstuffs, for there are and other breadstuffs, for there are millions of acres of rich alluvial fand in the South and Southwest yet to be developed. Senator Ingalls, who has given much study to the question, declares that "the Mississippi Valley will support and enrich, without crowding, 500,000,000 people, and be not only the granary but the workshop of the planet."

THE RAILWAYS OF THE FUTURE.

We may reasonably expect, if the opinions of statesmen like Ingalls and railway experts like Depew and Fink railway experts like Depew and Fink and Huntington are to be believed, that on the Fourth of July, 1926, it will be possible to enter a palace car at New York or Chicago or San Francisco and take in it a continuous journey to Val-paraiso or Rio de Janeiro. By that time the American continent will have been, in the opinion of these men, together by continuous iron concentrated at the isthmus and radiating over the United States and the South American continent. Already the engineers are at work haking surveys. Ex-Mayor William R. Grace said to the writer that the railway over the Andes, connecting the Peruvian plateau with the Pacific Coast, is practically finished. A link will be built extending through Peru to Bolivia and the Argentines, and the only engineering work of great difficulty in this inter-continental system will be that which is necessary to surmount the mountains of Ecuador and Bogota The engineers who have made preliminary surveys declare that such mastery of the mountains will not be so difficult as was the surmounting of the Andes by the railway roadbed which has just been

It is not Mr. Depew's opinion that any within the next twenty-five years. The tendency will be to consolidation existing systems, to perfecting v to the roadbeds, and especially to the development of fast trains. Railway managers now say that it is reasonable to expect, even with no new developments, that early in the next century it will be a part of the schedule of every great trunk line to run trains betwee the seacoast and Chicago, or other citie of the Mississippi Valley, between th breakfast hour and bedtime. The publicity of t will by that time have demanded train service averaging about sixty miles ar hour, and it will be easily attained. These conjectures do not take into con n the possibility of the substi-electricity as a motive power

THE ERA OF CANALS.

Financiers and men who are making a study of commercial conditions are satisfied that the United States is just entering upon an era of canal building, and that by 1926 the country will be bisected by several great ship canals which shall practically overcome the limit put upon ocean commerce by the Coast. The Chamber of Commerce of New York has informally of New York has informally ex-pressed an opinion that the Erie Canal, stretching from Buffalo to the Hudson River, must be deepened so as to admit ships of considerable bur-den then. Col. Frank Bond, who is well known among railway managers as a man of great ability, declares that it is inevitable that a ship canal be cut across the State of Michigan, say from Grand Haven to the St. Clair River. Capitalists are already in consultation over the constitution of a ship canal across New Jersey to the Delaware, thence across Maryland to the Chesaake, with a view ultimately of tending it through the North rolina sounds to Charleston or vannah. The expectation is that rly in the next century a ship canal, of floating as great vessels as are carried through the Suez or will be carried through the Nicaragua Canal. carried through the Nicaragua Canal, will be cut across the upper part of the Florida peninsula, thus shortening by 1000 miles the trip from the coast cities to the Nicaragua Canal. The great West is determined that a ship canal shall be built from Chicago to the Mississippi. It is reasonable to expect, therefore, that by the 150th anniversary of the nation's birth there may have been developed the most stupendous canal system the world has ever known, affecting—in a mauner of which it is impossible to estimate the extent it is impossible to estimate the extent— the commercial relations of the United States with other countries as well as the relations between the various cities to the future of the United States is indulged in, the part which electricity will play in such development possesses the most fascinating interest, partly perhaps because we are now just on threshold of the electric era. I threshold of the electric eta. It is barely ten years since electricity out-side of its use as a message-bearer has had commercial development, but the strides have been so enormous—and in a sense so romantic and surprisingthat it is common epinion that the that it is common epinion that the won-derful things which electricity is about to do are beyond the power of the imag-ination to conceive. However, there are some things which it is reason-able to expect from present conditions can be accomplished by the year 1926. Mr. J. J. Carty, who is a man of expert authority respecting the telephone, says that by that time the entire United States will be within the range of the telephone. Every community will be in speaking Every communiny will be in speaking communication with every other one. This is not only reasonable to expect, but sure to come. When the World's Fair opens Chicago will speak as easily with New York as it now telegraphs, and the enormous plant which is now being erected will be extended, so that on the morning of the Fourth of July. on the morning of the Fourth of July, 1926, a patriot in San Francisco can exchange compliments and congratulations with another in Boston as easily as though they were face to face. In a lasser way the development of the tele-phone is sure to be greatly extended, as perfection of instrument and service and cheapness of cost are secured. ELECTRICITY AS A MOTIVE POWER. Henry Villard, Simon Sterne, Prof. Forbes and Edison are convinced that it is not only reasonable to expect that electricity will supplant steam as a mo-tive power, but that it is sure to do so, so that within the next quarter of a cen-tury the railway locomotive will have passed into tradition as the stage coach as. Exactly the form in which this motive power will be used is something about which there is difference of opinion. Some of the experts are convinced that the trolley system, or some devel-opment of it, will be used where long opment of it, will be used where iong-distances and great speed are offered to the traveling public by any cor-poration. Mr. Carty says that the best electricians are of opinion that the time is near at hand when by electric railway it will be pos-sible to go from New York to Philadel-phia. a distance of ninety miles. in phia, a distance of ninety miles, in three-quarters of an hour, and from New York to Chicago in seven hours' time. Mr. Villard and Mr. Sterne are inclined to think that an electric motor either receiving electric power from beneath through the tracks, or else by a highly developed storage battery, will be in common use within the next fifteen or twenty years, running at a speed of from seventy-five to one hun-dred miles an hour, and with as much dred miles an hour, and with as much safety as is now maintained upon any of the fast railway lines. Of course, it is easy to see that such a development as this would have a vast influence— both socially, politically and financia'ly upon the people, and would tend to revolutionize civilization almost as greatly as the introduction of railway traveling did. Prof. Forbes declares that the storage battery has not yet come, yet he asserts that it is entirely feasible and is bound to be developed. When it does come a revolution will be sure to follow, especially in steamboat navigation, street car travel, as well as numerous smaller but perhaps not less important ways. With a perfect storage battery it is reasonable to expect that within the next twenty-five years electricity will have furnished the notive power for ocean steamships instead of steam.

It is reasonable to expect, according to the electric experts, that within the next twenty-five years electricity will be made a common servant, especially in the cities, and to a considerable ex-tent in the small villages. To illus-trate: Mr. Carty says that in a city like New York coal will only be burned by 1926, probably at various stations here and there throughout the city, and it will be burned simply to develop electricity, which will be conveyed into electricity, which will be conveyed into houses exactly as gas is. Within a house electricity will perform many duties. It will serve for light and will be utilized for heatand and will be utilized for heat-ing. It will heat a single room just as an electric light lights a single room, or will heat the whole house just as the owner chooses. It will take the place of coal for cooking. Already electric ovens and boilers are on the market, which do the work of the cook stove perfectly, and which have not been brought as yet into genral use because of expe serve to run elevators, and will be utilized for a vast number of the employ-ments of the household which now rebut is sure, according to Mr. Carty and many other experts, to be as common an occurrence soon after the next cen tury has opened as is the use of gas and from a common supply electrical experts be when the perfect storage battery is developed it will, to a considerable extent, take the place of horses, not only as a motive power for street cars, but for private vehicles. Small batteries will be built and attached to vehicles, or even so small a thing as a bicycle or with good roads, which, by the way, are sure to be one of the developments of the near future, may to a certain extent supplant the private carriage or the nublic compliant. the public omnibus. As a social ques-tion this has been discussed by electricians in a speculative manner, and many of them believe that with such development there will follow a reac-tion from the present tendency of people to congregate in great cities.

AS AN AMUSEMENT. It is reasonable to expect, also, that one of the dreams of Bellamy may prove a reality before many years in the next century have passed. It is quite probable that in many houses there will be placed a telephone with audiphone attachment, which will make it possible for those collected in a parlor to listen at their ease to a concert or an onera. Electricians de not speak or an opera. Electricians do not speak except in a speculative way, of the sibility of reproducing not only the sounds, but the spectacit of an opera, although Mr. Edison says this can and will be done. But in this article it is designed to refer simply to those things which may reasonably pected. The telephone already is used to carry the melody of a concert into private parlors, and it is a mere question of expense that prevents a general use of this sort. The expense is a received. this sort. The expense is sure to be materially reduced as to make such so materially reduced as to make such use as cheap as opera or theater tickets would be for a family party.

Scientific electricians are convinced that the possibilities of the future development of the phonograph are enormous, although in this respect the commercial electricians are not as yet quite ready to agree with them.

In chatting with men of authority on electric subjects one finds that they speak with something of awe of one man is unable to conceive of the mighty consequences which will follow such discovery. It will revolutionize civilization; it will change the political and social relations of men; it will make great cities unuecessary; it will give aerial navigation; it will reduce to a minimum all labor with the hands, and if it does not tend to produce that state of socialism which is the dream of the theorists, then Edison is mistaken.

The problem may be solved at any.

The problem may be solved at any time. Some of the acutest intellects engaged in electric research are giving it thought. Edison himself turns to it at times, realizing that in the solution of the problem lies the mastery of the most powerful force for procuring the happiness of men that the world contains, and he believes that it will be solved, and if it is in the near future, then the celebration of the 150th and then the celebration of the 150th an-anniversary of the Nation's birth will anniversary of the Aaron's birth will be of a nature and delight of which it is impossible for us to fully conceive. Old things will have passed away, and the things which are new will be marvelous.

Narrow Escape of the Handsom Bonebrake-Bryson Block.

A Dangerous Blaze in the Roof of th Structure Discovered Before it Got Beyond Control-How it Originated.

Between 5000 and 6000 people gath ered on Spring and Second streets about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon to witness what promised to be one of the most disastrous fires, that ever visited Los Angeles. At that hour smoke was noticed issuing in considerable volume from the roof on the Spring-street side of the Bonebrake-Bryson Block, at the northstreets, when an alarm was turned in, and in a few minutes the streets in the vicinity were packed with people.

The fire was caused either by a defective flue from the elevator engine in the basement or a little gas engine in the sixth story at the head of the elevator shaft. This latter engine is used to furnish power for the presses used in the Government job-printing office on that floer. that floor.

The fire had been burning almost an hour before it was discovered and had gained considerable headway, espec-ially in the ceiling and on the sixth floor. A heavy slate roof confined the flames and caused the smoke to work its way down through the halls and stairways in such a manner that when the firemen arrived they found it impossible to reach the seat of the fire in the ordinary way. In a few minutes ladders were connected with the fire escapes and in a very short space time three streams of water were pling on the fire. The immense tank the roof was brought into play and less then ewenty minutes after the alarm was turned in the fire was under control and the upper part of the build-ing was so saturated with water that all danger was passed.

The fire department deserves considerable credit for the manner in which the fire was handled, for had there been any delay and the flames given a chance

o get under good headway, one of the biggest blocks in the city would have been destroyed. The fire was first discovered by several gentlemen, who happened to be on the top floor. They first noticed smoke issuing from crevices in the plaster. issuing from crevices in the plaster, and shortly after it began pouring out through a window opening into the attic. An investigation was made, when the fire was located, and the fire hose on the top floor was run to the spot, where a hole was knocked into the plastering, and the flames could be seen. At this time it is believed that the fire could have been extinguished without calling out the engines, but no one could turn on the water, and after making several efforts, the party was Something About the Great Fam ines of History.

The Great Floods of the World-Chat With Russian Ministers-What Ex-Minister Lothrop Says.

WASHINGTON, July 1, 1892.-[Special Correspondence.] By the time this let-ter is published I will be in the heart of the famine districts of Russia. I mail it as I start for the steamer which is to take me to Hamburg. From thence I will go direct to St. Petersburg, and by stage coach and drochsky, will make my way through the country where it is said from 80,000,000 to 40,000,000 people are starving. The famine will be at its highest from now on until the harvest in August, and the crops must be very large in prevent its extension on into the winter. Within the past week I have spent some time in looking up the great fam-ines of the world and I find that this Russian famine is one of the most terrible mankind has ever known.

THE GREAT FAMINES OF THE WORLD There have been since the world be gan 350 mighty famines, each of which has killed thousands and most of which have carried off people by the millions The scriptures speak of famines in the time of Abraham, and the story of the seven years' famine which prevailed when Joseph was secretary of Pharaoh's treasury, is a matter of Biblical history. Rome had its famine hundreds of years before Christ, and about 300 years after Christ wheat was worth 400 pieces of silver a bushel in Antioch, and about 100 years later parents were eat. about 100 years later parents were eating their children in Italy to keep themselves from starving Great Britain has had famines back to the earliest of her records, and about the time that the Normans came over it is said that there Normans came over it is said that there was such a famine over the northern country that many of the inhabitants sold themselves for slaves and that the flesh of horses, dogs, cats and rats had fixed prices in the markets and some even ate human flesh. Twenty thousand people starved in London during the twelfth continue and in the time of the continue and the starved of the continue and the time of the continue and the time of the continue and the starved of the starv the twelfth century, and in the times of Queen Elizabeth wheat was worth $8 a bushel in London. Ireland has had many famines and every time the potato crop falls there are numbers of deaths from starvation. Less than fifty years ago the great potato famine of 1846 took place, in which more than 250, 000-people lost their lives and during which more than 1,000,000 Irishmen came over to America. This famine lasted more than six years and it re-duced the population of Ireland 2,500, SOME GREAT INDIAN FAMINES.

lndia has always been a land of famines. The people live from hand to mouth and they do not get fat when the crops are good. There are more than two hundred and fifty million people in India, and nearly every year there is some part of Hindoostan which is more or less affected by want of food. One of the higgest famines of India was just six years before our Declaration of Independence. At this time more than 3,000,000 people died for want of food, and the air was so infected by the smell of the dead bodies that it the smell of the dead bodies that it brought disease as well as death. Whole villages were depopulated and when the new crop came on it had in many cases no owner. This famine was caused by drought. Ten years later India had another great famine, and when George Washington first took his seat in the Presidential chair people was hiller and esting their other. bis seat in the Presidential chair peo-ple were killing and eating their child-ren in some parts of India, and thous-ands were dying of famine. At this time a terrible famine was caused by an army of black ants which swarmed over the country and destroyed the vegetation, and a few years later an army of locusts came along, and this was followed by a plague of rats, which ate up the crops and almost attacked the people themselves. In 1866 a million and a half of people perished from famine in Bengal, and about ten years later a famine in Madras cost the English Government something like $50,000,000.

HOW THE CHINESE STARVE

It is much the same in China. The cople are so many that at the time of great flood or a great drought they die by the millions. It is estimated that between ten and twenty million people were wiped out by the overflowing of the Yellow Riversome years ago, and in 1877 50,000,000 were suffering from famine, and an appeal was made to England and America for as-sistance. At this time women and children were offered by their parents for sale on the streets, and the for a married woman was $6, and could buy a little girl for $2. Many parents killed their children rathei than witness their prolonged suffering and the scenes of destitution and star vation were terrible. It is the same as the story of Russian famines, which seem to have occurred at intervals back to the beginning of history, and which promise, it is said, to continue in

SOME OF THE GREAT FLOODS OF THE WORLD One of the great causes of famine in the past has been floods. Whether the deluge covered the whole world or Whether the deluge covered the whole world or merely a part of it, it certainly killed millions and it remained upon the earth 150 days. England and Ireland have had many floods which have killed thousands and the inundations of Holland have several times nearly stroyed the entire population. In 1874 the floods of the Mississippi covered 250,000 acres of cotton, 100,000 acres of cotton, 100,000 acres of cotton france about this ame time caused loss of $75,000,000. Some of the floods of India have carried off men by the tens of thoragings, and in one inundation in Holland seventy two town were destroyed and 100,000 people

Such of the soil as is under irrigation always produces a crop, and the English government is now doing what it can to increase the irrigated area and it has covered the country with a network of railroads. One of the great troubles about the famine in Russia is the defective transportation. The railroads, while they run between large cities, are nevertheless comparatively few and it is not possible to get the food quickly to the people. Australia is another country which has been troubled with drought and nearly $90,000.000 worth of sheep were lost through lack of water in 1877, in New South Wales. Just about the same year 10,000,000 sheep were lost in the Australian colonies and in South Africa, and about this same time there was a period of drought in the United States. The Russian famine of today was caused by drought. For five months these Russian provinces had not a drop of rain and this great heat has been preceded by terrible frosty winds in the spring. All sorts of grasses were burned up and withered by the heat, and prairie rats by the tons of thousands swept over the country and ate up what was left. In addition to this there were clouds of insects which came by the millions and ate up eyerything with which they came in contact. The devastation cannot be conceived and it will be some years before Russia can recover from it. fore Russia can recover from it.

TALKS WITH RUSSIAN MINISTERS. I doubt whether the people of the United States have any adequate idea of the Russia of today. I have known a number of the ministers which we have sent to that country and J find that their ideas of Russia and the Czar are far different from those of ether people. I met the other day at Detroit exMinister Lothrop, who represented this country at St. Petersburg some years ago. Mr. Lothrop is one of the most famous lawyers of the Northwest, and he was very popular in Russia. He is a man of extraordinary ability and great culture and during his stay at St. Petersburg his daughter married one of the most noted of the Russian barons.
We have the idea that the Russian people are oppressed by the Czar and that they look upon him as a despot and a tyrant. Said ex-Minister Lothrop to me:

"The Russian people are as loyal to their ruler as are any people of the world. They reverence the Czar and look up to him as the ruler appointed by God. They do not know him as a man and the masses consider him of a higher order of creation than themselves. The Czar has been much misrepresented. He is a conscientious, God-fearing man and he is doing all he far different from those of other peo-ple. I met the other day at Detroit ex-represented. He is a conscientious, God-fearing man and he is doing all he can for his people. The Russian government, however, has to control more than 100,000,000 of souls. It is made up of many diverse elements and it has to have a vast machinery and numerous have a vast machinery and numerous The Emperor officials to control these has to entrust his work largely to sub-ordinates and though these are on the average efficient and honest, there are in Russia, as in the United States, some who may be not. Russia is to a large extent governed by the people and it extent governed by the people and it will be surprising to many to know that the Russians have civil rights to a larger extent than most of the other countries of the world. According to the village system of Russia, the vil-lagers govern themselves. They elect their own officers, with the exception of few who are amplifted by the Car a few who are appointed by the Car.

They make their own laws and they are allowed to do as they please where they do not come into contact with the Car. They have their own courts and they pass their own sentences now and then, even to sending prisoners to Siberia. The Russians are doing a great deal in relieving the distress of the famine, and Russia is spending millions upon millions of dollars for this purpose. I dod't believe there is a more kinder and better people in the world than the Russians and I consider then one of the great nations of the MINISTER SMITH ON THE RUSSIAN PAMINE. Hon, Charles Emory Smith, who has ust returned from Russia, says that the amine there will last up until late in August, and, without the crops are rood, it will probably extend on into the coming year. "The destitution of the coming year. "The destitution of the people is," says he, "inconceivable, and a great part of their loss come from their stock. The famine was so from their stock. The famine was so terrible that the cattle were carried off by it and the people have nothing with which to work their fields. In some provinces more than half the horses were killed and those that lived are haggard and lean. A great number of the cattle were either killed or starved to death, and inasmuch as these are largely used for draft animals in Russia, the loss is incalculable." Minister Smith says that the Russians have ister Smith says that the Russians have given between $75,000,000 and $100,-000,000 to relieve the famine and that they are continually sending food into the famine districts. Many of the richest and noblest ladies of Russia are working among the starving, and they have established soup kitche is and food supply points throughout the worst of the districts. Mr. Smith says that the Russians feel very kindly toward the Americans for the aid they have sent to them, and he thinks the action has brought the two countries closer to-gether. A few days ago I called at the brought the two countries closer to-gether. A few days ago I called at the Russian Legation in Washington on the Hon. Charles de Struve, who has for years represented Russia in the United States and be told me that Americans States, and he told me that Americans states, and not could not appreciate how kindly Russia felt toward them for their sympathy and aid in their time of trouble, and it is said that this feeling is current throughout the Russian empire and that its moral influence would be very great.

A FEW WORDS WITH CLARA BARTON.

It is well known that all the gifts of he United States have been through the Red Cross Society, with Miss Clara Barton at its head. How much these gifts amount to will be surprising to the people. Already four shiploads have been sent and these will average about $100,000 each in value. The Iowa corn, which left on the Tynehead, loaded that great ship down to the water and it will be of great use in the keeping alive of the cattle. This included 200 carloads of corn and it came cluded 200 carloads of corn and it came from Iowa alone. The millers of the Northwest furnished a shipload of flour and the citizens of Philadelphia bought 5000 barrels of Minneapolis flour and sent it off. A great deal of money has been contributed and much of this has come from little children. Miss Barton tells me she received the of this has come from little children. Miss Barton tells me she received the other day $68, every cent of which was contributed by children who had worked for the pennies, or who had denied themselves some luxury in order to get them for the Russians: Many children throughout the country have been allowed by their parents a cent a meal for doing without butter or sugar and some little ones have been paid by their parents a cent a day for doing certain chores and it is from, such pennies that hundreds upon hundreds of dollars have been gathered together and have been sent to the little children of Russia. The other day a little girl was brought into the Red Cross Society rooms here by her father. She had tightly clasped in her hands 30 cents which she said she wished to give to the hungry little ones wished to give to the hungry little ones of Russin. She had saved this and of Russin.

Numerous instances have occurred here and all over the country and the gifts amount in some cases to thousands of dollars. A few days ago a lady handed Miss Barton a slip of paper, saying she wanted to give this to the Red Cross Society, but she did not want her name connected with it. It was a check for connected with it. It was a check for $1000.

How the RED Gross works.

There is no more modest woman in the United States than Miss Clara Barton. She works very quietly, and to talk with her you would never imagine that she had managed some of the largest charitable efforts in the history of this generation. She is of about medium height and weighs, I judge, not over 125 pounds. She dresses in black and her only jewelry is her round pin of white enamel with a red cross in the center at her neck, and below this a or write enamer with a red cross in the center at her neck, and below this a great pansy made of an amethyst and presented to Miss Barton by the Grand Duchess of Baden. She does not court newspaper notoriety and her manners in conversation are as quiet and simple as those of any mother in the country. She makes you think more of a good mother than of any one else, and her eyes fill with sympathetic tears as she discusses the woes of the forming or the correct of suffer. of the famine or the sorrows of suffering humanity. She is a woman who loves her fellow-men and who is endowed with a large amount of the prac-tical ability of knowing how to help them. She was the first woman nurse them. She was the first woman nurse during the late war, and she did great good in the Franco-Prussian war among the wounded. She believes in doing good on a large scale, and she tells me that the Red Cross Society devotes itself to a study of the condition of the world and wherever it finds that there is want, destitution and suffering it considers it its duty to point out to the rest of the people the fact. It does not stand before the world as a beggar, but as a great information bureau which announces to the people who have as a great information bureau which announces to the people who have means where they may have the privilege of giving to help their fellow-men. It also undertakes to forward such gifts to those who are in want, and it devotes itself to national calamities rather than to individual ones.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.

"It is now more than a year," said Miss Barton, "since we saw the coming danger in Russia. We knew that the famine was imminent, but before we went to work we called upon the Russian legation and asked as to the situation and whether Russia would accept our help. We were told there that the reports had not been exaggerated, and we found that 20,000,000 Russian peasants were affected by the failure of found that 20,000,000 Russian peasants were affected by the failure of crops and that the people were living on roots and other refuse and that millions were on the verge of starvation. We organized our work at once and the result is well known. We will be sending over money and food/from time to time, though we may not send it in shiploads. We are receiving contributions daily, and we are glad to forward all that is sent." FRANK G. CARPENTER.

On Friday evening next, July Audran's popular comic opera, La Mas-cotte, will be produced at the Los Angeles Theater by a company of ama-teurs which comprises the best obtain-able talent in Southern California, under the management of Mr. D. Stew art Taylor. The opera will be elabo rately staged, every attention being paid to details, and as both chorus and principals have been hard at work for some weeks past under the direction of O. On Monday, July 11, Francis Wilson and his clever company will present for the first time in this city the new operetta, The Merry Monarch, which is credited with having made one of the most surprising hits in New York that any new production has ever scored there. Wilson is always a welcome visitor in every large city in every season, but the claims which he now puts in on public attention appear to be of such an attractive and substantial character that the theater is likely to be crowded as it has never been before.

In the part of "King Anso IV." the comedian is said to have a role for which he is admirably adapted, affording him exceptional opportunities for creating the most approarious merriment. Yet it is claimed for the operetta that its interest is by no means monopolized by any one individual, for Charles Plunkett and Gilbert Clayton appear to have scored On Monday, July 11, Francis Wilson

The original music was by the late Emile Chabrier of Paris, but this has been curtailed and supplemented by much new material by Woodson Morse, another Bostonian, who wrote Cinderella at School for the Boston Museum years

The story is founded upon an idea upon which centers all the fun of the opera. This idea is that "King Anso IV." and "Lazuli," a peddler of perfumery, were born under the same star and that one must die within twenty-four hours after the demise of the other. Anso is an Indian monarch of humor endowed, and his mirthful proclipities lead him, at the introduction, in seatch of a victim for execution on the annual fete day, in accordance with a custom lead him, at the introduction, in search of a victim for execution on the annual fete day, in accordance with a custom of his country and to please his people. The difficulty lies in finding a victim, but he at last encounters Lazull, whom he induces to reasonable utterances, and provokes into striking him. He is about to have Lazuli publicly killed, when the court astrologer rushes forth with the information that the peddler's death must be followed speedily by that of the sovereign, Lazuli is released at once, and from that moment on Anso's solicitude for the peddler's safety is most amusing and ludicrous. He encourages Lazuli to elope with Lilita, and Lilita's guardian orders solders to pursue the eloping couple and shoot down his ward's abductor. Anso's terror, when he learns of Lazuli's danger, is very comical, as is his relief when he learns that the peddler has escaped unbarred. learns that the peddler has escaped unharmed. Lazull is allowed to wed the princess despite the discovery that she had been brought on by Herrison, her guardian, and the ambassador extraordinary to marry the merry monarch. Furthermore, Anso announces that Lazull it is be highest adding emission. Furthermore, Anso announces that Lazuli is to be his heir, adding, quaintly, in an aside: "What does it matter, since he has to die first?" The orchestra will be under the direction of Signor A. de Novellis. Typical Rush-Millionaires vs. Tramps.

KINGMAN (Ariz.) June 28 .- [Corre spondence of The Times.] The rush to the new gold fields at Treasure Guich continues with increasing volume. Each train that arrives in Kingman bears embryo millionaires. Some of these, however, will probably go back full-fledged tramps.

The new mine is fifty-two miles North of Kingman, the nearest rail. road station, and nine miles from the nearest water-hole. The present find was made in a low range of lava-capped hills of porphyry and granite, a forma-tion which does not generally like the prospector.

The original discoverer, "Judge!" Shaffer, has fourteen locations here, and is prospecting for more. His first claim, the Norma, beads in contact with prophyry and granite on the east and runs west directly across the low range of granite hills, disappears in the wash or arroyo below. The Norma shows a vein of an average of two feetin width, of which eight inches is a rich chloride and hom silver ore that; runs not less than 800 onners per ton. The not less than 800 ounces per ton. The vein crops out over 500 feet and allowing it to be ten feet in depth, edicine would be 333 tons of 500 ounces are or 268,400 ounces of silver. Adjoining the Norma on the north is Shaffer's Treasure. This shows two paralled veins, one averaging ten inches, the other five of 800-ounce ore. Fully 500 feet of these veins crop out on the surface. Figuring this on the same basis as the Norma there would be 880,000 ouncer. The Artista is a restantial ounces. The African is an extension west of Norma, showing over 100 feet of croppings on two small veinsthatted gether may be safely estimated at six inches of 1000 ounce one which, figured out on the same basis as above, would the fifty tons, containing 50,000 ounces. The Garfield shows a six-inch streak of 800 ounce ore 100 feet along the sarrface, making 40,000 ounces in sight. The G. A. R. is the richest claim, in camp. It has two parallel veins about fifty feet apart. There is an eight foot wein where the center monument stands, two feet of which is pure horn silver. At alow estimate there is, sixteen inches of 800 ounce silver per 1000 feet along the surface and half that amount in the parallel vein. This gives 1,090ounces. The African is an extension

The Horn Silver shows 200 feet of an eighteen-inch streak of 1000-ounce ore, giving 800,000 ounces silver.

The Occident shows six inches of 600ounce ore 100 feet on surface, making 25,000 ounces in sixty tons.

These are among the richest locations and give a fair idea of the immensity of the strike. There is no discount on these figures. They are corroborated by a score of well-posted and conservative men, who have made a personal inspection of the new diggings.
While these figures are mighty encouraging to the locaters, there is not much to justify a grand rush. Everything in sight has been taken up—and jumped. Besides this a good deal of worthless truck not in sight has been likewise located. Probably 100 men are at work now, getting $3.50 per day. Eight hundred have visited the camp, a good many of whom would have been willing to work if the chance had offered. But the locaters of the rich claims are poor men. They have "bloomin' millions" in sight, but it takes ready cash to get it out and cash to buy grub, and 25 cents a pint to buy water, not to mention such little frontier luxuries as "rot-gut," which also requires cash. Several buildings are tier luxuries as "rot-gut," which also requires cash. Several buildings are now going up at Silverado—the new camp. There are three saloons, a mer-cantile establishment, restaurants and lodging-houses. Within thirty or sixty days accommodations will be had for a large number of people. A thousand men could find steady employment if the mines are developed. There is no the mines are developed. There is no question of the permanency of the camp or of the richness of the finds already made. But the miner or prespector should thing several times before rushing in unless he has enough each to keep "himself going" without depending on the country for a living. Walking is very bad and the distance between water holes is several miles.

The class of '85 of the High sch elebrated the seventh anniversary of its graduation last Thursday evening at the home of Miss Ellen Reayis on Doaglas street. The class has never failed to come together on this occasion each year, to talk over the old times at school and gravely to discuss their present condition and prosperity. Last Thursday evening the class of '85, past, present and future, was discussed by members and invited friends with increased pleasure, for the reunions become more and more delightful as the antly entertained her guests, assisted by her sisters, Misses Cora and Mamie Reavis. A delightful evening was spent in social conversation, after which the class proceeded to celebrate the occasion by enjoying the annual banquet.

Edward R. Bradley, the class president, acted at toast-master. His theme was "The seventh anniversary." He most happily introduced this part of the programme by a reference to the class prophecy that had been delivered seven years before at graduation. The made at that time were recalled with

Mr. Darwin, a few years before his

The observer found that Scotland. The observer found that the number of castings of sand thrown up by the lobworms gave an average of 50,000,000 to the square mile. A portion of the castings was weighed and the otal weight thrown up annually was thus shown to be, in some places, about 901 tons per acre; at other points it was a good deal less than this; but in still other parts it amounted to no less than 8146 tons per acre. How many and various are the changes produced in the sand by the wonderful activity of these industrious worms it is impossible to say. But it is easy to see how the presence of such creatures in large numbers operate with other forces to produce a kind of order on the surface of the earth and to replace crudeness by beauty. The thing that strikes one most, however, is the magnitude of the results which can be produced in a short time when a large number of separate individuals work in cooperation by the same methods toward the same end.

HOW THE BANJO ORIGINATED.

About 500 years ago a negro who lived in the town of Banjoemas, in the East Indies, near the coast of Java, took a cheese box, covered it with goat skin. ran a handle through it and strung

The English lovers of music considered it unworthy of use until these dusky fellows came over music considered it unworthy of use until these dusky fellows came over from America and crowded St. James Hall night after night, and the banjo-player became an idol.

Felipe Moreno's Long Term in San Quentin.

A Quarter of a Century Within the Walls of a Prison.

Punished for a Crime Which He Dectares He Never Committed.

He Will Return to Los Angeles, Where Wife and Children Live, and Where He Expects to Spend His Last Days.

The efforts of the friends of Felipe Moreno have at last been successful; and he has been pardoned by the Governor, after spending twenty-five years in San Quentin, the longest term in the history of the prison, for a murder which he declares he never committed. The following details are from the San Francisco Examiner of Friday:

The following details are from the San Francisco Examiner of Friday:

Philipe Moreno drew a breath of free air yesterday for the first time in twenty-live years. He has been a prisoner at San Quentin since 1887. He went into prison a young man, full of life and vigor. He came out old and broken.

"I am an old man now," he said, "an old man: Not in years, I am only 50. Some men are young at 50. Those men are not convicts. When I went inside those walls in yhair was black. Look at it now. When I went inside those walls I was straight and full of vigor. Look at me now. The years are very long in prison. The longest year of all was the year just passed. The longest night! ever knew was last night. It seemed to me that noy heart would burst before the morning. I was so afraid something would happen.

"What if I should be taken suddenly sick and have to stay in prison a day or so untill grew better? What if there had been some mistaken the reckoning? I had gone over it time and time and time and again. I had counted every minute a theusand times, but still I was not sure. What if the directors should discover at the last minute that there was a day or two more due on my time? It made me break into a cold sweat to think of it. Of course I knew there couldn't be any such mistake, but I get sort of foolish over it all, I guess.

"The big prison bell rang at 6 o'clock this morning. When I heard it I was mighty gind. I had all my things ready to hand in—my good conduct stripes and chevrous, you know—but I had to wait till after breakfast. I don't think I ate much breakfast.

"The minute I could get leave I changed my striped suit "The minute I could get leave I changed my clothes. How I hated my striped suit when I saw it lying before me. I never knew how much I hated it until I took it off forever. At 8 o'clock, the gate-keeper threw open the gate. I stepped outside. I could scarcely walk. I trempled so. I couldr't think which way to go for a while. In a minute two peeple came up to me. A man and a woman. They called me uncle. They were my nephew and niece. I had never seen them before, for they were born since I became a prisoner. I was very glad to see them. We hurried to the stage and went to Green Brae; then we came to the city. I saw a train. I had never seen one. They were not here when I went to the prison. That was long ago, very long ago. I was a young husband then. I was married just six months when they were fer in the deep when green we have a seen the course of the stage and reference in the stage and went to the stage and went to discuss the stage and the stage and went to the prison. My boy is a man now. I have never seen him. My daughter is married and has children of her own. I have never seen her. I have often wished I could see my children, but I would not let them visit me in such a place.

"My wife—my dear wife—she has never forgotten me. Never forgotten me. She has written me every week for nearly twenty-five years. She has worked very hard to take care-of-her children. She has had a great deal of trouble, but she has never forgotten. She has never stopped agent of the proposed the the propos

"I am going to Los Angeles, where my wite is. I shall work at my trade there. I have learned shoemaking in the prison. I have served twenty-five years in the penitiary for a crime I never committed. I never killed Dr. Marsh. Olivas-killed him. He and his friends lied me into prison. I do not bear them any grudge. I nave other things to occupy my mind. I am glad I am free. I am glad I shall soon see my wife and children. That's all I am thinking of now."

The crime for which Moreno served the longest term of imprisonment ever known at San Quentin Penitentiary was the kill-ing of Dr. John Marsh, one of the most highly respected residents of Contra Costa ounty.

Marsh was a native of Massachusetts, a graduate of Harvard College and a young man of much promise. He came to California in 1836, and shortly after his arrival purchased the rancho "Los Meganos" in Contra Costa county. He at once took possession of the ranch and resided thereat until the day of his murder.

Three Mexicans. José Antonio Olivas, Juan Garcia and Filipe Moreno, were vaqueros who had been employed by Marsh at his ranch. A short time prior to the killing they had quit the doctor's employ, and Olivas claimed that a small sum of money was still due him for services rendered at the

On the 4th day of September, 1856, Dr. On the 4th day of September, 1856, Dr. Marsh left his place to go to Martinez, a distance of about thirty miles. He traveled in an open buggy drawn by a single horse. At Martinez it was his intention to leave his buggy and continue his journey to San Francisco, where he was engaged to be married on the following day. He was without weapons, if exception be made of a small loaded cane which he nabitually carried.

Dr. Marsh never reached Martinez. The morning after he left his ranch his well-known horse came straggling into Martinez driverless. The lines were dragging on the ground and the cushions, tumbled about in confusion, were marked with muddy and bloody fonturints.

The wiidest excitement raged in and about the town of Martinez, and the authorities at once started out to search for the missing doctor. His corpse, horribly gashed and mutitated almost beyond recognition, was found in a ditch by the roadside about two miles out of Martinez. It was plain that it had been dragged from the buggy and for some distance along the road by means of a lariat. Besides the injuries thus inflicted the body bore numerous deep cuts and stabs, any one of which would have been sufficient to cause death.

Only a few days clapsed before the three Mexicans named above were arrested and charged with the murder. They had been behind the bars but a short time when they broke jail, and it was several months before Moreno and Olivas were retaken. Their companion, Juan Garcia was not arrested mil atter the conviction of Moreno, and dled in jail before his trial came on.

At the trial of Olivas and Moreno the former turned State's evidence, throwing the burden of guilt upon the shoulders of his companion. According to his story, the former turned State's evidence, throwing the burden of guilt upon the shoulders of his companion. According to his story, the three met Dr. Marsh in the road and he colivas) demanded the money due him. The doctor replied that he woulds pay it upon his return from Saf Francisco. At this reply, so declared Olivas, Garcia and Moreno set upon the doctor, beat and stabbed him, and dragged him from the buggy with a lasso, afterward tossing his body into the ditch where it was found.

Though Olivas gained his freedom through, this sfory it has never been believed by the great majority of the people of the county, the prevailing epinion being that Moreno looked on while Olivas killed the doctor.

Don Dolores Cañedo and other old-time residents were looked up, and while several of them knew families by the name, none of them could locate the wife of Felipe Moreno. It was stated that a woman living out on Alameda street was perhaps the one referred to, but she could not be found. It is hardly probable that Moreno has yet reached the city, as his arrival would have been known to some one.

CRIME AND CRIMINALS.

A Singular Burglary Reported - Officer Collins Discharged. One of the most singular burglaries that has occurred in this city for some time past was reported at the police station night before last.

The residence of W. A. Hersey, on the corner of Quebec and First streets, was entered at 5:30 o'clock Friday evening and every room was turned topsyturvy, but, strange to say, the burglars did not take away a single article. They scattered papers and documents right and left and stacked a lot of jew-elry and silverware on a table, but did not take the stuff away for some reason. The most singular part of the story is the fact that half a dozen neighbors saw the burglar crawl through a dow at 5:80, but they made no to capture the thief and did not

Detectives and officers visited the house later in the evening and managed to secure a good description of the thief from the neighbors, but up to a late hour last evening they had not succeeded in finding him.

OFFICER COLLINS RELEASED. Bell Says He Was Not to Blame in the

The assault case against Police Officer John T. Collins was concluded in Justice Austin's department of the Police Court yesterday morning, and Collins was promptly discharged.

Several witnesses were examined, but nothing of importance was brought out until George Bell, the prosecuting witness, took the stand. Bell stated that Collins struck him over the head with a club, but he was to blame himself, for he was drunk and disorderly and provoked the officer to make the assault. He thought nothing of the matter until some days after he was released from the city prison, when he met Horace Bell, Esq. and that gentleman insisted on his having Collins arrested. The attorney took him to the District Attorney's office, where the complaint was made out and he swore to it. Bell further said that he would not have sworn to the complaint had he not been drunk, and he was sorry now that he club, but he was to blame himself, for drunk, and he was sorry now that he

IT CARRIES A HEADLIGHT. The Sea Serpent as He Developson Rus. slan River. [Cloverdale Reveille.]

The monstrosity "What is It?" an account of which we published two weeks ago as baving been seen in the river between here and Ukiah, has evidently passed down the stream to the ocean, as passed down the stream to the ocean, as a nondescript animal was seen by parties on the iron bridge a few evenings since. Their attention was attracted by an unusual noise up the river, and, in looking in that direction, though quite dark, they saw something parting and lashing the water into foam and approaching them very rapidly. At first they thought it a wounded deer, but they were soon disabused of this idea by a scream from the animal that they were soon disabused of this idea by a scream from the animal that sounded like nothing they had ever heard before, and which stampeded them from the bridge into the road. Here they had a momentary view of the monster as it passed under the bridge and disappeared down the stream. As he neared the bridge he raised about ten feet out of water, and giving a soft of bellow dodged and passed under, making the water fly right and left as he pursued his journey. A peculiar oder was left behind him that the boys described as almost stifling—unlike odor was left behind him that the boys described as almost stiffing—unlike anything they had ever experienced before—producing a sort of garlicky taste in the mouth and a limburger atmosphere. A kind of phosphorescent light was observed about the head that enabled them to trace him until he disappeared around a bend in the river. There is no doubt the animal is the same that was described in our paper, and is evidently a sea sermal is the same that was described in our paper, and is evidently a sea serpent that entered the Russian River from the ocean, and getting tired of fresh water was taking a back track to his native element. It is to be regretted that he couldn't have been captured for exhibition, as "there were millions" in him could he have been willed to the couldn't have been to be a sea of the couldn't have been willed to the could he have been the couldn't have been to be a sea of the could he have been the couldn't have been to be a sea of the couldn't have been to be millions" in him could he have been killed or taken alive. It was a golden opportunity for some one, but has been missed, as thousands of other good things have been. We hope the people down the river will keep an eye out for this amphibious stranger, as he is likely when he snifts the sea air to take a short cut over the hills to the ocean. Birds and Crops.

[American Gardening.] A careful observer in Buffalo Prof. E. E. Fish gives as his estimate, that birds save to crops annually over $100.000,000 in the United States. He remarks that "In many sections in-sect-life is still so abundant as to make human life almost unendurable. In other sections it is only kept in check by birds, and there is no place in which, were this check removed, it would not clearly hold the balance of power. The number of flies measures, grate and number of files, mosquitoes, gnats and other small insects destroyed in one day, in a small area, by warblers, swallows and flycatchers alone, is beyond computation. From daylight until dark, all through the summer mouths, these birds were those some dark, all through the summer months, these birds wage incessant war on the enemies of man. It is known that the bird-hunters of Florida kill birds while they are rearing their young, because of the great beauty of their plumage at that season, and leave the little ones to starve to death. One who went through the hunting-grounds speaks of the horror it gave him to hear the pitiful screams of these dying little birds,"

THE HERMIT OF TAMALPAIS.

He Lives by Fishing and Trapping and Desires to Be Let Alone.

[San Francisco Cail.] Way up in a glen near the summit of Mount Tamalpais lives a hermit who for the past six years, has made his abode in this solitude. He is not a strange, reticent and forlorn-looking individual who is weary of the world and its cares. Not by any means. George Bell, for such is the hermit's name, is a jolly-looking individual with a round face well bronzed by constant exposure to the sun.

He states that his reason for living so far from others of his kind is that he likes solitude. "I am very contented here. For the past six years I have not had a care nor a worry. Now, don't think you, man, there is anything romantic connected with my residing here. Thus he spoke to a Call reporter.

Bell lives entirely on the products of his own industry. He claims that he fares better than a millionaire and relables what he east. His cabin is con-cisco, Oakland and Alameda. The only companions he has are two cats. Bell earns his living by the aid of a fishing line and several bird and game traps. He drinks nothing but water, and never uses flour, tea, coffee or sugar. He delaims he has not bought a single article from a grocery store since he took up his abode on the mountain. He shock his head saidly as he said: "Well, this country is building up. I will not stay here long. It will pick up my things and go to some unsettled and mountainous district."

Adulterated Cheese [Pacific Rural Press.]
It is claimed that the sale of skim cheese has grown to large proportions on this Coast, but we dare say that there are few persons who deal in them, let alone the consumers, who are aware how they are made. On this Coast, skim cheese is manufactured of emulsion of refined lard and skim milk. coast, skim cheese is manufactured or emulsion of refined lard and skim milk. At the East, a large proportion is made of emulsion of refined lard and potatoes, no milk being used. How the emulsion of refined lard is prepared is a secret, but it can not be very expensive, for skim cheese seil in our market, in jobbing lots, at around 5 cents a pound, while at the East they are sold for still less money. The manufacturer and also the dealer in oleoma-garine and butterine are liable by law to severe punishment if they sell either without proper notice to purchasers, yet cheese made chiefly of hog fat or cotton seed oil is sold to unsuspecting persons as cheese made from milk. Its consumption in quantity undermines health, even if it does not entail death, yet the person or persons who are instrumental in this health-destroying business go unpunished. Organized farmers, who did so much to have laws passed defining oleomarga-rine, and visiting with severe punishment those who manufacture and also those who deal in it without proper safeguard for the general public would safeguard for the general public, would do well to have similar laws passed about skim cheese.

How men can behold such things and yet vote the other ticket is a mystery to everybody else. If you will run your hand, or better, your sleeve, lightly down a blackberry cane from op to root you will observe that all the briars hook upward to catch everything that comes down. Then if you will run up the other way you will observe that all the briars hook downward, in order to catch everything as it comes up. A Remedy for San Jose Scale.

John Hatzlip of Compton writes to the Herald the following remedy for San José scale: "I have an orchard, a part of which is the worst infected that I have ever seen, and I commenced last year expe-rimenting with kerosene, such as we use in our lamps, full strength. I took a small can of it and poured it down each limb of young pear trees, beginning at the top bud, and continued until the oil reached the ground. This was done early in the spring. The result was it killed every scale and did not injure the trees. They made a growth of from three to four feet last year, and are now free of scale and making a good

In February last I followed the instructions of the Herticultural Commisnot that I was afraid of the coal oil, but their formula was the cheaper. I ap-plied it and supposed I had killed the bugs, but on examining the trees about five weeks ago I found the scale all alive and growing on the fruit until ap ples the size of small marbles were as specked as turkey's eggs. The young growth on the trees was at that time from six to eighteen inches long. I bought ten gallons of kerosene and sprayed twenty-five or thirty old and young apple trees, and at the time there is not a sign of a live scale The trees look as well as before spray-ing, and they did not shed their fruit, but the apples are growing.

TOWERING SHASTA,

The Majestic White Monarch of the North.

With His Feet in the Pines and His Crest in the Clouds.

Seen from the Railroad at Sisson and Other Points of Vantage.

The Crowning Pinnacle in the Scenery of Northern California, the Sacramento Canyon and its Forest-clad Flanks, Sisson (at the foot of Mt. Shasta.) June 25, 1892 .- |Staff Correspondence of The Times. | Shasta, like all stupendons things in nature, grows upon beholder. At first sight it is imposwible to form a just conception of the greatness of this monarch mountain, towering upward to such vast heights against its background of illimitable blue. At intervals for 200 miles along the railway route this vast mountain confronts the eye as it dominates the

The approach from the southward is by the line of the California and Ore-gon Railroad. As the road winds its ward the mighty glacier is feeding the laughing rills that gurgle at his feet and run on musical with laughter, to join the waters of the Sacramento, while underneath their crystal waters are numberless mountain trout, loving the shadowy pools where the water flows most quietly, yet flashing sometimes their speckled sides in the sun. I have studied Shasta here from all points, taking a carriage and riding beyond and around it, looking at its bold front, viewing it in profile and passing front, viewing it in profile and passing behind it, and the more I have studied behind it, and the more I have studied it the vaster seem its proportions and the grander its altitude. It is unquestionably one of the most impressive points in California scenery. It is estimated that if all parts of the mountain, from an altitude of 4000 feet upward, should drop into the bowels of the earth and be lost to sight it would leave a yawning chasm not less than seventy-five miles in circumference.

But I am glad today to stand at the foot of Shasta, the great white monarch of the North, wrapped in his mantle of eternal snows, locked in ice, gray and hoary as time, and clasping to his awful breast century-old glaciers, his frozen summit lifted more than 14,000 feet above the sea, showing an uninterfrozen summit lifted more than 14,000 feet above the sea, showing an uninterrupted uplift from the land below his base of almost 11,000 feet, or over two miles above the railroad line.

Two miles sheer upward into the blue heavens! Only think of it! But you may think until time ends, but if your eyes do not behold you can form no conception of the distance lying between one standing in this summer-green valley and the frozen, snow-crested sumley and the frozen, snow-crested sumwonderful way through the tortuous meanderings of the Sacramento Canon you see Shasta sometimes through the green breaks of the pines, first catching mento, where visions of it are always mento, where visions of it are always varying as you ride onward. Sometimes, seen through the forest aisles, it resembles a white cloud, then anon its snow-crested dome is lifted above the forest tops, while again there are glimpses of abysms which have been worn by lava floods, while from other points you behold its central peak lifted more than 2000 feet above its shoulders, a towering white god fronting the sun.

As we approached the point from which the first glimpse of Shasta is obtained every eye was turned northward toward the pine slopes until the curtain was lifted and the gaeat silent mountain filled the scene before us. mountain filled the scene before us.
"There's Shasta!" was the cry that ran through the long line of cars, and there was a quick rush to windows and platforms and exclamations of "How grand!" "What majestic height!" and then a hush fell upon us as we looked and grew reverent.
Nature has very carefully prepared her approaches to this mountain monarch. We do not come into his presence lightly. We go up from the murk, the din and the tameness of the lower world through rock-walled cañons and world through rock-walled cañons and tunneled deeps, along mountain gorges, and up, up by circling lines of rail. Goubling upon our track, with ever the sentinel pines above and around us, and a hundred running rills and streams singing and babbling about us. Great granite pinnacles tower upon the hills; mighty forest ways open into vast untrodden aisles, where sometimes the sentinel grizzly keeps guard, and the wild deer runs free in Shasta's shadow.

The whole Shasta region is sublimely picturesque, and when the ceanothus is in bloom, and the golden rod sways in the light breeze, and asters, lilies and lupines show their splendor of color, and the whole world around seems bursting into bloom, no more beautiful flower plot can be found than this blossoming belt through which we pass beneath the frozen cone of Shasta.

Bees and butterflies find here a golden pees and butterflies find here a golden paradise, and the happy wild bird pours his tide of song which mingles with the unfailing melody of the numberless streams which everywhere show their silver lines flashing through the green lengths of the land.

The wooded zones of Shasta reach the stream was the stream of the land.

The wooded zones of Shasta reach to about the 8000-foot level, and present a great variety of chapparal and tree growths. There are broad belts of cogrowths. There are broad belts of co-niferous trees among which are the dif-ferent varieties of pines, the spruce the silver fir and the incense cedar, and the silver fir and the incense cedar, and those forest giants are many of them 200 feet in height, their massive trunks rising erect in long unbroken lines straight upward into the blue air.

Lichens are said to love the otherwise bare cliffs, and even above the timber line there is a wilderness of minute bloom, which the distance hides. At the base of Shasta there is a wooded ocean of green which stretches a hundred miles into the distance, and which is not less than eight miles in width.

The rim of the old dead crater is visible from the plain, but where once the burning floods of lava poured forth, sending their scorching tides down-sight of it while in the Upper Sacra- linger of God has been pressed, and looking upward we feel the presence of divine Power in his vast subof divine Power in his vast sub-blimity and immensity. There are times when mighty thunderbolts are hurled upon his head, and the lightnings flash in angry wrath upon his forehead, but serenely he stands, his locks hoary with snows innumer-able, the towering pillar of this moun-tain world. At his feet towns and villages are seen, and little ham-lets sleep, and the lowly cabin stands looking like a tiny pebble at his base. There is no need to cross the occan to see the Alus, for a giant Alu-ocean to see the Alps, for a giant Alp Monarch of the wilderness and sceptered King of mountains that within thy vision Cluster, the stars dream on thy crest whilst thou best stated and the circling planets with the path of circling planets with Thy frozen hand. Mighty glaciers are Hidden in the beats beats

Of thy giant heart. Thou dost look unmoved
Upon the earth sleeping at thy proud feet,
While nurses she her bright unnumbered
Flowers as offerings to thee, which pour Their fragrant incense from swaying censers.
They are like motes within thy sight, atoms Infinitesimal. How thy bold forehead, White with the snows of ages, fronts the sun;

But his hot lances thrust at thee smite thee in vain. As well might we thrust our feeble Fingers at his face hoping to mar its Brightness, as he pours out his beams thinking. To meit the winter of thy soul. The sky is the pillow for thy head, and thine ear Catches its secrets. Thou didst hear when save sang The morning stars together, and blown through through The empyreau deeps about thee does Linger yet the echo of that harmony

Sublime. Thy stony eye unwinkingly Gazes, at Time, thy hoary brother.
And thou dost know all that his hand hath wrought And thou dost know an that his hand hath wrought Whilst furrowing the centuries with change.

The earthquake hath smacked its hungry The wide plains before thee, but thou hast

The wide plains before thee, but thou hast stood Moveless as the firmament, untrembling
In thine awful grandeur. About thy feet
Thou gatherest thy skirts of confers.
Filled with balsainle odors, and we see
The towering cedars, the giant fingers Of thy mighty hand, point upward to the Stars, which thou at night dost wear as iewels

jewels
On thy forehead. O mount sublime, heaven Seems to hold as much of thee as earth.
Thou
Dost fold the flashing lightnings to thy Breast, and with thy tireless arm fling out

Thunderbolt when storms play round thee and the Winds fling loose thy snowy banner. The green and spreading plains smile at thy base; The rivers run, fed by thy melting snows; The rivers run, fed by thy melting snows;

The little rivulets dance gleesomely;
The glad birdsings his joyous summer song,
And the trees, a million-bannered army,
Gather at thy base, while rocky heights like Many altars rise, and all the air grows Golden in the cloudless summer sun, but Thou, O Shasta, dominating all, clothed Round with frozen majesty, of all art King, and we, earth's pigmies, look upward to Thy awful form and tremble at our littleness. ELIZA A. OTIS.

Thy awful form and tremble at our littleness. ELIZA A. OTIS.

In a subsequent letter I will attempt to describe something of the route from Sisson (at the foot of Shasta) to the Oregon line, including the famous crossing of "The Siskiyous" by the California and Oregon-Railway, and a view of the fertile valley of Rogue River, and the town of Ashland. E. A. O.
